Sunny the cat retiring from Nature Center

... but not without controversy

By JACK CLARK
Co-PUBLISHER

Sunny, the resident Nature Center cat, who held that post longer than most, has been removed by Riverside County and currently is looking for a home through the Animal Rescue Friends.

Campfires doused in Mt. San Jacinto State Park

By J.P. CRUMRINE

Following the announcement of new tighter fire restrictions throughout the San Bernardino National Forest, the California State Parks has also tightened its restrictions on the local state areas.

At the Mt. San Jacinto State Park and Wilderness, the extreme fire danger caused by prolonged drought resulted in implementing new restrictions effective Tuesday, June 30.

These restrictions apply to Stone

Creek and Idyllwild campgrounds.

- Open fires, including campfires and barbecues, are prohibited. Portable propane or gas stoves are still permitted for cooking within designated campsites and day-use areas.

- Fireworks are prohibited.
- Smoking is permitted only in designated areas.

These restrictions are in conjunction with similar restrictions put in place by the U.S. Forest Service recently.

Fatal hit-and-run traffic collision

About 7:15 p.m. Saturday, an unidentified 64-year-old Escondido man was driving his silver 1999 Nissan Maxima westbound on Highway 74 near the intersection of Carrizo Road. Natalia Adaca, 58, of Escondido, was his passenger.

Mary Jane Plante, 46, of La Quinta, was driving her gray 2005 Toyota Tundra eastbound on Highway 74.

Plante crossed the double-yellow lines, colliding head-on with the Nissan Maxima. After the collision, Plante fled the scene on foot.

The driver of the Nissan succumbed to his injuries shortly after transport to the Desert Regional Medical Center by a California Highway Patrol helicopter.

American Medical Response transported Adaca to Eisenhower Medical Center with non-life-threatening injuries.

On Sunday, a witness called CHP dispatch to report Plante as the woman involved in the collision. CHP officers located Plante at the Lake Hemet Market Sunday morning, while she was waiting for a friend to pick her up.

Plante was arrested without incident and charged with felony driving under the influence, felony hit-and-run, and gross vehicular manslaughter.

The incident is being investigated by CHP Officer Ron Esparza. The Riverside County Coroner's Office has not released the victim's name.

The Hill now has its first traffic signal — at least for the next six to 12 months. Traffic control began Monday, July 6, on Highway 74 just north of Lake Hemet as the project to replace Hurkey Creek Bridge begins. A 24-hour traffic signal is now active, with one lane of the highway closed.

Results of community public health meetings to be shared

By J.P. CRUMRINE
NEWS EDITOR

On April 14, the Riverside County Department of Public Health came to Idyllwild to discuss and listen for ideas to improve community health. This was one of 17 community sessions across the county during March and April.

The results of these sessions will be shared and discussed at a July 22 public meeting. The Health Improvement Plan workshop will allow county residents to set goals and draft a plan to improve the health and wellness of neighborhoods across the county, according to the DPH press release.

From 9 a.m. to noon that Wednesday at the Moreno Valley Conference and Recreation Center, the county public health group will report on the survey's results.

The top three issues were social environment, economy and natural environment. Participants felt safe neighborhoods and strong families were important components of the social environment. Good jobs will help improve health, while homelessness is an important contributor to unhealthfulness. Air quality and pollution are the dangers seen in our natural environment, according to the survey.

Nearly 3,500 county residents participated in the surveys and diabetes and asthma were the two chronic diseases most people expressed concern about.

To learn more about the survey results and the next steps, including drafting an action plan, you can register for the July 22 conference at www.eventbrite.com/e/shape-your-community-tickets-15463498741. For more specific information about the event, call 951-358-5557.

Fire Safe Council secures another grant

By J.P. CRUMRINE
NEWS EDITOR

Last Thursday, the Mountain Communities Fire Safe Council received notice of another grant approval. It will receive $151,726 for various fire safe projects on the Hill.

The California Fire Safe Council announced grants to local fire safe councils in 22 counties. The CFSC received three grants from the U.S. Forest Service and reallocated these funds to the local FSCs.

"We'll use some of the funds to continue with our fuel reduction projects," said Edwina Scott, MCFSC executive director. "Also in September, we'll be maintaining the Pinyon and Poppet Flats brush-pile sites."

Through the grants from CFSC, local fire safe councils undertake fuel-reduction projects, such as community chipper programs, fuelbreaks, roadside defensible space projects, Community Wildfire Protection Plans and other plans.

In addition to the federal funds, the projects will utilize more than $4 million in matching contributions, both in-kind and in cash, according to the CFSC release.

OUT LOUD

We held the Ernie Maxwell Community Spirit Award contest earlier this year so the winner, Wendy Read, could ride in the Fourth of July Parade.

At first, it seemed unfortunate that because I waited so long to enter, our parade placement came toward the tail end. But because of that, the seven of us in our "float" — Don Parker, Bob Krone (Max and Bea's son), Wendy and her daughter Shelby, me, my grandson Carter and his friend Emma, walked to Fern Valley Corners, and watched and cheered nearly all of the parade from there. Yea for the bagpipes, Idyllwild's own annual marching band.

While we cruised down N. Circle in Don's really cool, leather-interior, turbo-charged 1957 Chevy Bel Air (yeah, it was a smooth ride), Wendy and I noted the so, so many unfamiliar faces in the crowd. And what a large crowd.

At the end of the ride, Carter and I met up with family at the festival where the kids enjoyed the inflatables and games, and the adults sat under a tent just to cool off. That occasional cloud blocking the sun offered some relief.

We headed off to the American Legion later to dive into some deep-pit barbecue and hang with family, then home to crash.

I love the Fourth of July spirit in our town and sharing it with visitors. I love that once our parade was so small the entries went around the route twice so it seemed larger, but now it contains Riverside bagpipers, as well as Hemet, Palm Springs and even San Marcos auto clubs. And yet, it hasn't lost that small-town feel.

Our Rotarians, led by Bob Parish, and Mountain Community Patrol take on a tremendous task each year herding snakes from all angles of FV Corners. Hurray for these volunteers.

BECKY CLARK, EDITOR

Does FDA really protect us?

EDITOR:

The Food and Drug Administration has been around, in one form or another, for almost 200 years. In 1820, the U.S. Pharmacopeia provided the first compilation of "standard drugs" for the U.S. In 1862, President Lincoln appointed a chemist to serve in the new Department of Agriculture, and the Bureau of Chemistry, predecessor of the FDA, was formed. Later, in 1902, the Biologics Control Act and the Meat Inspection Act were passed into law, and in 1906, President Theodore Roosevelt signed the Food and Drugs Act. This prohibited interstate commerce in misbranded and adulterated foods, drinks and drugs.

In 1949, the FDA published a guide, "Procedures for the Appraisal of the Toxic Chemicals in food." Then came the Miller Pesticide Amendment, the Color Additive Amendment and the Federal Hazardous Substances Labeling Act. Sounds like they're taking pretty good care of us, making sure the things we use and eat everyday are safe for us and our families.

In 1962, the Consumer Bill of Rights was proclaimed by President John F. Kennedy. Included in it are the right to safety, the right to be informed, the right to choose from a variety of products and the right to be heard. I like the sound of all of those.

Maybe in the beginning they were all about protecting the public, but now, things are different. The FDA, big ag and pharma are all scratching each other's backs, while people like you and me are being exposed to life threatening chemicals like pesticides, artificial sweeteners, food additives, and GMO/GE foods.

The FDA recently moved to ban the use of trans-fats, or partially hydrogenated vegetable oils, which were found to cause about 20,000 heart attacks and 7,000 deaths a year. Unfortunately, the ban won't go into effect for three years. How many more heart attacks and deaths? You do the math.

This ban also has too many loopholes, like the one that allows processed food manufacturers to avoid full disclosure of package contents.

I hope this makes you angry like it does me. The best way to vent our anger is to contact our political representatives and tell them we want the FDA to be the agency it was meant to be, one that looks out for and protects the people of this country, not companies like Monsanto.

Save Sunny

EDITOR:

I recently learned about the Nature Center's so-called "volunteer" who is attempting to get rid of Sunny, the center's beloved house cat.

Sunny presents no public-safety issues, as alleged. In fact, it's just the opposite. She serves an important role as head mouser and has been doing so for at least five years. She also acts as an ambassador and greeter for the center. She is deeply loved by the staff, visitors of all ages and residents of Idyllwild. The center is her home.

If you read the newspaper or get your news via the Internet, you can't help but see story after story about cat cafes and cat libraries. Some animal shelters are now even renting kittens. Why? Because they are wonderful creatures who bring joy to people's lives. Remember, the mayor of Idyllwild is a dog.

I simply cannot believe that anyone would allow this "volunteer" to dictate how the Nature Center should be run. What a horrible precedent this sets. What's next? The desert tortoises or the gopher snake must go because she also finds them offensive?

If you want to save Sunny, please write Keith Herron (kherron@rivcoparks.org) or Margie Valdez (margievaldez@rivcoparks.org) and let them know how you feel.

What threat is Sunny?

EDITOR:

In light of the uproar over the removal of Sunny, the Nature Center cat, I've come up with a few questions that might help Riverside County decide if this action is truly necessary.

1. Which poses a greater threat to the health of our forest?

- Humans who dump trash and toss cigarette butts
- A four-year drought
- Forest fire
- A fully vaccinated, well cared-for domestic cat

2. Inside the buildings of the Nature Center, which poses a greater threat to the health and well-being of the staff, volunteers and visitors?

- A visiting human infected with

Hopefully, this little quiz will help shed some light on this ridiculous situation. Let Sunny stay at the Nature Center.

JANICE MURASKO
PINE COVE

For dog's sake, be sensitive

EDITOR:

We love Idyllwild's special events, and we love our dogs, but sometimes the two don't mix. I was witness to abuses at two recent venues I want to publicize, since some dog owners seem to be blind to their pet's distress. Each event is a wonderful occasion and a must-see for me, yet both left me aching for the dogs affected by that ignorance or lack of empathy.

First, at the Lisa Haley concert, a couple of people carried their little dogs onto the dance floor to share the foot-stomping good times. The first reaction of many people was, "How cute is that?" However, when one considers the acute hearing sense of dogs, one realizes that it must be torture to be held captive in front of a loud band. People have the option of moving away if it gets overwhelming; these dogs did not. Many pets were present and may have been perfectly content at a distance from the stage, but my thought was, "If that little dog wasn't deaf to begin with, it's a sure thing after this — at least temporarily."

Second, and even more shocking, was the incidence of abuses at the Fourth of July Parade. From the dragging of leashed pets into crowds they wanted no part of, to the futile efforts of dogs to hide from strident sirens, panting dogs alongside bicycle riders and (especially appalling) the tap-dancing steps of dogs trying to save their tender feet from burning pavement. Certainly, there were pets who seemed to tolerate the conditions without complaint, but all day I saw episodes of animals suffering the effects of extreme heat and noise because those owners wanted their company.

Is this any way to treat your "best friend?" Dogs may suffer in silence, but they do suffer, and our whims may cause great damage. I offered water and suggestions about shade and comfort to a number of dog owners; some responded well, others not so well. No "SuperDog Hero" swooped down to rescue the victims.

Please be realistic about the place you want to take your dog. Will it really be fun and safe for them, or are you just showing off a compliant pet in a cute costume? And if you see problems such as I've described, respectfully offer help if you can.

Learning to heal

A series of talks about personal experiences with health

BY J.P. CRUMRINE
NEWS EDITOR

Coping with, dealing with and recovering from chronic pain and fatigue is the next panel discussion in the Healing series presented by the Center for Natural Learning.

"Four local individuals will discuss how coping and healing from chronic pain and fatigue are still a challenge," said Carol McClintic, director of programs. "Everybody has had a very positive attitude. There is a way through it, and there are ways to deal with it."

This discussion begins at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 14. It's the second of four. "Learning to Age Gracefully" and "Learning from Caretaking a Loved One(s)" will occur Aug. 11 and Sept. 8, respectively, all at the Caine Learning Center.

A broken ankle and hip replacement surgery gave Renate Caine, executive director and director of research, plenty of time to cogitate about the process of suffering and healing, as well as to recognize the journey in which her emotions were traveling at the same time.

The result was the first four-part series on healing, which was last fall. The second series began in June with a discussion about "Learning from Physical Balance Issues."

Next week, Mary Morse, Larry Kawano, Gary Kucher and Caine will share their experiences and tribulations enduring chronic pain.

"The whole point of the series is that healing is not just experts and books," Caine said. "Everybody on the panel has experience with this problem and they will share what they have learned. We hear from them in ways which people can identify with."

Many people suffer silently because they believe that they are alone. Physicians, nurses and possibly books or online resources, either impersonal or distant, are their resources. These panel discussions offer the resource of another individual, on the Hill, who has or is going through the same problem.

"It's an opportunity to learn from others who have a similar experience," Caine said. "These people are living archives and have learned to handle these problems."

At the July 14 session, chronic pain and fatigue will be discussed. Caine is one of many people who have suffered from fibromyalgia.

Fibromyalgia syndrome is a common and chronic disorder characterized by widespread pain, diffuse tenderness, and a number of other symptoms. Like arthritis, fibromyalgia can cause significant pain and fatigue, and it can interfere with a person's ability to carry on daily activities.

"This is a condition that can easily exhaust you and there's a lot pain," McClintic said. "For years, doctors didn't know what it was and how it made people so uncomfortable."

Caine will discuss her experience. After it first occurred, it seemed to diminish, but after her hip and leg injuries, "It returned with a vengeance," she said with a scowl.

Eventually, through her research, she gave up sugar and bread, which is improving the disorder. Of course, when she shared this with a doctor, he replied, "I can't tell my patients that. They'd go off their meds."

The panelists will be very honest about their experiences. Caine and McClintic encourage the audience to ask questions that will help them learning about solutions and ways to cope, and to share their stories with all those in attendance.

If a third series is organized, McClintic hinted that it might focus on the effect of stress on human health.

All of the sessions are at 6:30 p.m. at the Caine Learning Center on Pine Crest Avenue. The suggested donation is $10 and questions may be sent to info@nlri.org.

Tim Lange: candidate for Pine Cove Water District director

By J.P. CRUMRINE
NEWS EDITOR

Pine Cove Water District residents will have a choice of three candidates for the two director seats up for election in the August mail-in ballot election. Diana Eskew, a board member, who is in her first election, and two challengers — Sharon Kaffen and Timothy Lange — are the candidates.

Voted ballots must be received by the elections official no later than the close of the polls on election day or be postmarked on or before election day and received no later than three days after election day to be counted.

Before August, the Town Crier will interview each candidate. On Tuesday, Aug. 4, the Pine Cove Property Owners Association and the Town Crier will hold a candidates' forum for PCWD voters. The forum will be from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Pine Cove Fire Station (Station 23).

The first candidate interview is with Tim Lange, a former educator.

Lange is a native Californian and has been visiting the Southern California mountains for many decades.

He was born in 1939 and raised and educated in Fullerton. He graduated from Fullerton High School and California State University, Fullerton. From there, in 1962, he began his educational career in Oakhurst as a teacher and counselor. Over time, he became a school psychologist and worked at the state Department of Education.

Eventually, after devoting 30 years to school and special education, Lange retired from Banning Unified School District in 1998.

IDYLLWILD WATER DISTRICT JUNE 2015 NEWSLETTER

IWD Mission Statement: To provide reliable water & sewer service in a safe, cost effective & environmentally sound manner in accordance with the community needs

"2-day-a-week Landscape Watering" over "Use Restrictions"!

As you are aware, California is currently experiencing an extended drought, which consequently calls for mandatory reduction of water usage. There are certain water use restrictions that apply to everyone in California, regardless of their source of water supply, including private well owners. As of June 1st small water suppliers who have 15-2999 service connections are required by the State Department of Public Health to reduce their water usage. The CDPH suggests two water reducing methods; however, small water suppliers are only required to commit to one method. Per the emergency regulations, Idyllwild Water District must either commit to reducing water usage by 25% or limit outdoor irrigation watering to two days per week. Due to Idyllwild Water District's customers and patrons continuous conservation efforts we have decided NOT to implement a water reduction by 25%. We appreciate and commend your conservation efforts, but we must enforce limitations on outdoor irrigation watering.

Specifically, what does this mean to me?

Many may not have a clear understanding of what their specific requirements will be. As of June 1st all customers have been required to abide by assigned watering schedules. Customers with odd address numbers are allowed to conduct their outdoor irrigation on Thursday and Sunday, and customers with even address numbers are allowed to conduct their outdoor irrigation on Wednesday and Saturday. Also, as stated in the Stage 2 requirements, customers must limit their irrigation of outdoor plants and gardens to the hours of 6 p.m. to 8 a.m.; this time restriction is to limit evaporation loss. These limitations apply to all water users, even individuals who possess their own water tanks. The utilization of non-potable water to conduct outdoor irrigation is not exempt, but non-potable water should not be stored for long periods of time due to potential health hazards. Our customers are asked to comply with these restrictions between June 1st and November 30th. We appreciate all your water conservation efforts to-date, and the Stage 2 limitations in its entirety can be located at <http://www.idyllwildwater.net/forms-and-reports/water-conservation-stages/>.

We would appreciate your help in compiling email addresses of all customers in case urgent Stage changes occur. Please contact Idyllwild Water District in person or via telephone, (951) 695-2143, to provide email addresses.

We compliment our customers on their continuous conservation efforts. Find out how to make your home more water efficient at <http://www.h2ouse.org/>.

The next IWD Board meeting will be held on July 15, 2015 at 6:00 p.m. at the Idyllwild Water District Boardroom. We would welcome your attendance.

Lange

When asked how he found Idyllwild, Lange replied, "Idyllwild found me. Since I was 8 years old, my family vacationed at Mammoth Lake and I fell in love with mountains.

TC: What will you contribute to the board?

Although Lange only moved to Pine Cove in December 2014, he has been an active volunteer ever since retiring. His contributions to Forest Falls were primarily volunteer projects for its Fire Safe Council.

"I was the special project manager and represented the Mills Creek Canyon FSC with the Inland Empire Fire Safe Alliance," he said.

During his tenure with them, he led several projects, including a revision of the Community Wildfire Protection Plan and identification of nearby communities at high risk of wildfire. This was a joint effort with several federal agencies, including the U.S. Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management.

"The initial study omitted a lot of the smaller, rural, unincorporated communities," Lange said this was his reason for offering to revise it. The result of his team's work was to increase the number of at-risk San Bernardino County communities from 43 to 65.

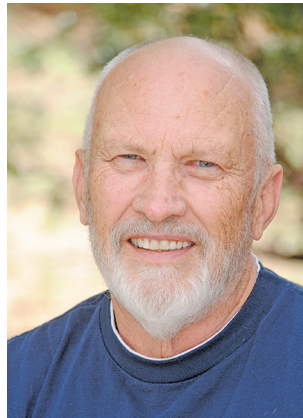

The work from this project contributed to both the National Fire Plan and the local CWPP.

"We were helping to hold on to the vital assets at risk," he explained. "Anything I can do to contribute to safety and welfare of my neighbors is more fulfilling for me than money or other rewards."

He is joining the Mountain Communities Fire Safe Council and has promised 100 hours of volunteer work to Executive Director Edwina Scott.

TC: With respect to revenues and water supply, what should customers expect in the next 12 months? ... and the next five years?

Lange answered directly and without apology, "It's too early for me to respond. I'll need some time on the board."

TC: Why do you think PCWD water consumption is starting to increase?

"Well, it depends on the percent increase," Lange replied. "But that is subject for monitoring and a board discussion."

TC: If you were to cut the budget, what are the priorities?

"I'll be dedicated to fiscal analysis of all aspects of the budget," he stated. "It will be systematic and collaborative following good-management practices."

TC: Besides simply urging "conservation," what else can the district do to prevent entering a Stage 3?

"Sometimes memories are short-lived," Lange said. "It takes continual effort to keep conservation in front of the public. You have to train and educate the consumers."

Lange also complimented PCWD's current efforts to encourage water conservation. He sees technology playing a more important role in the future.

"For example, I've read that they are developing small generators which can use the water in pipes to produce electricity," he said. "I don't know whether that's cost effective yet or still experimental. But the future will provide new tools."

Conclusion

"I want to apply this effort to the water district," Lange concluded. "The reason why is simple. I want to support what seems to be a pretty superior agency with a long history of service and subsequent awards. I enjoy people and being able to serve."

Movies and conversations

Every third Monday of the month, Spirit Mountain Retreat hosts a movie and conversation for free at the retreat.

The next movie is "I Am," the story of a successful Hollywood director, Tom Shadyac ("Liar Liar," "Nutty Professor," "Bruce Almighty"), who experienced a life threatening head injury and his ensuing journey to try and answer two very basic questions: "What's wrong with our world?" and "What can we do about it?" (78 minutes).

The event is from 2 to 4 p.m. Monday, July 27.

A trip to the '40s with Bill Tole and the Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra

Also with singer Nancy Knorr,
Pied Pipers' lead singer

By MARSHALL SMITH
STAFF REPORTER

What could be better than an outdoor summer concert with the big band hits of the Dorsey Brothers and vocals made famous by the Pied Pipers? And it's not just nostalgia for another time. This music swings. The smooth sounds of clarinets, saxes, trumpets and trombones in recognizable '40s harmony, driven by a walking bass line and feather-light drumming – perfect summer concert fare.

And for Idyllwild's dancers, this is as good as it gets. Many pop music historians lionize the '30s and '40s big band era as the coolest, swinging-est and most optimistic time in American music. In any list of the top ten big bands of the swing era, with luminaries Glenn Miller, Harry James, Benny Goodman, Stan Kenton, Count Basie and Duke Ellington, the Dorsey Brothers consistently rank in the top tier.

Ken Dahleen's Idyllwild Summer Concert Series scored a coup in booking trombonist Bill Tole, current leader of the Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra and singer Nancy Knorr, female lead of the Pipers, for the Thursday, July 16 date.

Tole is not only a gifted musician, with a trombone style reminiscent of Tommy Dorsey, he also played Dorsey in Martin Scorsese's 1977 film "New York, New York." Tole joined the Tommy Dorsey Band just after graduating with a degree in music from Pittsburgh's Duquesne University. After his stint with the Tommy Dorsey Band, Tole played lead trombone for the Air Force's Airmen of Note, the orchestra once headed by trombonist Glenn Miller (Miller had been a member of the Dorsey Brothers Orchestra in the 1930s.) Tole was a player in the New York studio scene before moving to Los Angeles in 1967 where he became a much in demand first-call studio session musician.

While part of the L.A. live music and recording scene, Tole worked with Louis Bellson, Les Brown, Bob Crosby and Harry James, and with singers Frank Sinatra, Ella Fitzgerald, Tom Jones and Pearl Bailey. He also recorded for film scores and played in television variety show bands.

At right, Trombonist Bill Tole, leader of the Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra, and his sister Nancy Knorr, lead singer of The Pied Pipers will both appear for Ken Dahleen's Idyllwild Summer Concert Series on Thursday, July 16.

Tole imports a Dorsey group of 15 plus singer, Nancy Knorr, who in addition to being a standout vocalist, is Tole's sister. Knorr will cover hits of the Pied Pipers and other big band female vocalists including "Dream," "Green Eyes," "Tangerine," and "Embraceable You." Tole said the band would sample not just Dorsey standards, but also hits of other big bands.

Tole is the perfect band leader to celebrate the Dorsey Brothers' musical lexicon, having joined the Tommy Dorsey Band in 1959 and having headed the Jimmy Dorsey Band for over a decade. "The Dorsey bands were as important as any in the big band era," said Tole.

"Tommy was the forerunner of the pretty ballad trombone style, and both brothers were intelligent businessman who hired the best musicians and singers."

So dust off your swing moves and dance down memory lane to big band standards "Johnson Rag," "Besame Mucho," "Amapola," "One O'Clock Jump," and "Pennies from Heaven."

The Jimmy Dorsey Orchestra takes the stage for the Idyllwild Summer Concert Series at 7 p.m. on Thursday, July 16 on the grounds of the Idyllwild Community Center. There is no opening act for this headliner.

This event is free to the public, as are all of the ISCS productions. The opening concert of the season, Lisa Haley on July 2, was packed. Attendees started placing chairs in favorite spots early in the day and parking was at a premium. So plan your arrival time accordingly and remember to bring a flashlight to find your way to your car after the concert.

The budget for this season is over $30,000 and to date only half has been raised. Donation jars will be passed during the concert. Proceeds from ice cream and water sales by the Coopersmiths are donated to ISCS.

Jan Jaspers-Fayer paints, draws, sculpts, designs, builds and invents

BY MARSHALL SMITH
STAFF REPORTER

"My problem is I'm too diversified," smiled Dutch native Jan Jaspers-Fayer. Eighty-six years young, Jaspers-Fayer still creates, still exhibits and is still interested — in everything.

From bronze-cast sculptures to pencil drawings to anything in glass, Jan finds something that catches his eye and sparks his interest. His palette ranges from charcoal grays to brilliant primary colors. He plays with and refracts light through glass. He notices and celebrates creatures great and small, and cultures that have honored them.

It is that "interest in everything" that feeds Jaspers-Fayer's art. Visit his Idyllwild home and it is everywhere — indoors and out — metal and glass sculptures marching up his hillside; Native American figures standing silently among metal and glass kokopelli; and brilliantly colored butterflies, many butterflies. "I throw nothing of my art away," said Jan. A discard from one design, an outline or a mold becomes part of another piece.

Jan is the oldest of 22 Idyllwild artists chosen to paint one of the deer in the outdoor public art installation called "Idyllwild Deer Sightings." And, of course, his doe, a community favorite, is covered in butterflies — monarchs, painted ladies, big, small, blue, yellow, red and orange. As a child in Holland, Jan was fascinated by the transformation of caterpillars to butterflies. The fascination continues — caterpillars adorn the narrow legs of his doe and grow gradually into butterflies of intricate definition and delight.

Jan's community involvement is longstanding, whether as an active Rotarian or poster designer for Jazz in the Pines; or as designer of stained-glass church windows, including some for St. Hugh's Episcopal Church at Fern Valley Corners.

Given that he works in so many, when asked to name his favorite art medium, Jan hesitates, then smiles. "Maybe the favorite is still coming," he said. He is soft-spoken and has a gentle sense of humor. When one talks with him, it is as if he is imparting little confidences — shared with a wink.

Born in 1929 in Holland, Jan was a young teen when the Nazis invaded. Tall for his age, he said he kept himself inconspicuous on his father's farm in eastern Holland to avoid being rounded up by the Germans.

"My Dad was a good artist," said Jan. "I attended the National Academy in Amsterdam and studied art. After the war I was drafted into the Dutch army." But, as is the case with many artists, work was hard to find. "I began to make a living in industrial design, mostly in lighting and light fixtures."

After he moved to the United States in 1961, his career in industrial design led to steady commissions and creations of huge chandeliers, featured in major hotels — chandeliers more than 6 feet tall that were manufactured in Taiwan and mainland China. "Five or six times a year, I traveled to China and Taiwan to oversee production," he said. In the process, he obtained nearly 20 patents for his lighting instruments — backplates, lamp housings, combined ceiling fan motors, housing and blade irons units, and others.

Artist in many media, inventor, Renaissance man, quiet and a quintessential gentleman, Jan is, like his Idyllwild Sculpture Garden, a community resource and treasure.

An Idyllwild resident since 1979, Jan has a current exhibit at the Idyllwild Town Baker. The exhibition will remain through the end of July and features his oils, watercolors, etchings and dry point, sculptures, and bronze, steel and glass art. His ad for the exhibit shows a group of ravens, an "unkindness" of ravens, in black and white formed into a circle. The tag line reads, "This is what Idyllwild is raven about."

Annette Haywood-Carter is new IA film chair

Plans to create a pipeline to Hollywood

BY MARSHALL SMITH
STAFF REPORTER

Hollywood film professional Annette Haywood-Carter is the new chair of the Idyllwild Arts Academy Department of Film and Digital Media. Best known for her breakout directorial debut movie "Foxfire," and her recent theatrical release "Savannah," Haywood-Carter brings current industry experience and Hollywood connections to her new position.

As script supervisor for many A-list Hollywood directors, and writer/director/producer on her own projects, Haywood-Carter plans to use her knowledge of how the television and film industries have evolved over the last 20 years and her current connections with major studios, producers and directors to build a pipeline to Hollywood. "Creating a pipeline of this sort is difficult to do if you are not an industry insider. We can use this direct industry access as a way to attract the best students and market our program," she said.

Haywood-Carter is passionate about using her professional experience to educate IA film students in how the industry works and how to navigate it as a beginning professional. While still working professionally in Hollywood, Haywood-Carter developed the film program at the Savannah College of Art and Design into a major force for training film and television professionals.

She plans to bring many of the cutting-edge educational programs and tools she developed there to Idyllwild Arts — with a major difference. "At SCAD, I built and grew a pipeline between the college and Hollywood, with internships with high-end television and movie producers and studios, as well as master classes and mentoring," she said. "The difference at Idyllwild Arts is that we're only two hours from Hollywood, where the equipment, techniques and working knowledge of industry professionals are the top of the game. So rather than have limited-in-time internships, I will be creating a program to take our film students to Los Angeles for regular classes with industry professionals. Film technology is changing so quickly that it must be taught by those who are the most current. Film professionals tend to be enormously generous and excited to share whatever they know, whatever toys they have, with students."

Haywood-Carter also cited the advantage of having IA students experience the work ethic in Hollywood. "You don't get to make mistakes," she stated. She then related a lesson she learned that she will pass on to IA students. "I got hired as a second assistant director and got fired on the second day," she remembered. "It was before cell phones and GPS and I missed a turn on the way to a location shoot and was an hour and a half late. My replacement arrived at the same time as I did. I want to get our students on scene so they can see the work ethic, that it is highly intolerant of mistakes. You can't explain that environment. You have to experience it. I want to get them in the room with the people they'll be learning from and networking with."

"Every school has visiting professionals," she explained. "That's not the same as going every week to work with professionals in their own work environments. I feel a strong responsibility to make our students ready, to work in Los Angeles on location with professional actors."

Haywood-Carter noted the challenge in balancing regular classes in Los Angeles with an already challenging IA curriculum of both academic and arts classes. "We have to set it up so that they're not missing academic classes," she noted. "These students have to be successful in life and all aspects of their work and careers."

Haywood-Carter is undaunted by any challenges she may face in creating a cutting edge educational program for IA film students. "There are many things to do," she said, "adding current professional software such as AVID and Movie Magic that is in use now, as well as obtaining new cameras and creating classes in the latest technologies. As soon as I have a cinematographer on faculty we'll be making camera purchases. Also, I'm not going to use the USC training model, where one senior student film gets made. Each senior will have his or her film made. I also want to restart the scoring for film program, using the availability of an accomplished orchestra to play student movie scores, and work with Chris [Reba, new music chair] to get a recording studio up and running."

But even with access to the latest technologies in Hollywood, and learning from and working with industry professionals on a regular basis, Haywood-Carter noted that the foundation of industry success is still good a story.

"Storytelling is the basis," she said. "I'm a believer in strong foundations in writing and the aesthetics of images."

Asked whether, with all she is planning for her IA students, she will have any outside projects, Haywood-Carter paused then answered. "I explained to Doug [Ashcraft, head of school] and Pam [Jordan, Idyllwild Arts Foundation president] that if I am going to do this [take this position], I don't want to work away from my career," she said. "I have three projects in development, including a feature, television series and a major film. In August, I'll be going to Berlin to 'shadow' the director of 'Homeland,' with the goal of directing an episode of the series. I also explained to Doug and Pam that I was not doing this just for myself but for my staff and my students, so that they, too, are in the pipeline and don't become dated and out of touch with the industry as it is now."

Annette Haywood-Carter, new Idyllwild Arts chair of the Department of Film and Digital Media, seen here on the set of her 2013 feature film "Savannah." Haywood-Carter directed, co-wrote and co-produced the indie film. At left is "Savannah" co-star Chiwetel Ejiofor (Best Actor nominee for "12 Years a Slave") and at right, Jim Caviezel.

Palencia Turner to help Idyllwild Arts grow

By J.P. CRUMRINE
NEWS EDITOR

Palencia Turner is the new Chief Development Officer at Idyllwild Arts Foundation. She begins July 13 and brings extensive fundraising experience to her new position.

Most recently, she was vice president of development at KCETLink, which includes the nation's largest independent public television station serving Southern and Central California.

Development is not an easy profession. One has to learn to accept "No" frequently. Today, the competition for donors' gifts is great.

"In this environment, there are many single issue non-profits," she stated. But her skill is finding the people with the inclination to match wealth with an institution, where they see a return on investment.

"It's hard but interesting. It's never easy. Philanthropists are interested in more than spending or giving their money," Turner stressed. "What do you give back to them?"

One difference between Idyllwild Arts and the corporate world will be the annual level of fundraising and the pressure associated with that. The KCETLink budget is about $27 to 28 million each year. All of that comes from donations — a tremendous responsibility that never stops. That business model lacked diverse income sources, which the school has from tuition.

A major campaign — to fund the Bowman Center — is completed. Turner will develop a plan to raise about $3 million annually as a start.

The next key event at Idyllwild Arts is the 70th Anniversary of the school, but Turner does not plan to begin the fundraising then, rather she wants some time to develop the plan.

Also she stressed that IA President Pam Jordan has only a year at the school. Also Mark Davis is just beginning his time as Director of Programs.

"We need time and space to figure things out as a team working together," Turner said. "My suggestion is a campaign needs to be steady. To do it right and well, it needs to be thought out."

Although Turner is a fifth generation Californian and a Beverly Hill High School graduate, she went to school in the east. She earned her bachelor's degree at Howard University and her graduate degree at Georgetown. Her older sister is also a Howard alumna, but both have returned to their SoCal roots.

Not only did she travel across the continent for her education and began her career there, she admits that traveling is her hobby.

"It shows me things beyond my reach, opens my eyes and expands on my knowledge," she said. "Traveling helps broaden strategies and creates more empathy for people around the world."

Turner and her son, who starts college this fall, live in Pasadena and her main office will be in Los Angeles. But she acknowledges that she has to immerse herself in the Idyllwild Arts culture and environment of the school.

Finnells' goal with 2nd Saturday is to add to Idyllwild's art reputation

Next event is Saturday July 11

By MARSHALL SMITH
STAFF REPORTER

Scott and Kimberlee Finnell started "2nd Saturday" in 2013 with the goal of attracting new visitors to the Hill and adding to Idyllwild's reputation as an art destination. "It was also a way to help local merchants and restaurants, and to publicize the town," said Scott.

The event has grown significantly since debuting in

AAI joins Middle Ridge for an "Uncorked" event

By MARSHALL SMITH
STAFF REPORTER

The Art Alliance of Idyllwild will join Chris and Melody Johnston's Middle Ridge Winery in an art and wine event at the winery's "under construction" tasting room on North Circle Drive.

Billed as "Art Uncorked — Judged Art Show and Gallery Tour," the Saturday and Sunday, July 18 and 19, event continues AAI's commitment to recharging and reimagining the local art scene.

Although Middle Ridge Winery is headquartered in Idyllwild, its grape sourcing, wine fermentation and aging are conducted off-Hill. Until now, its only wine tasting location was in Temecula. With construction of an Idyllwild tasting room and art gallery at 54301 N. Circle Drive, Middle Ridge intends to celebrate its Idyllwild roots and create a new Idyllwild cultural destination. For the Johnstons, the tasting room and gallery offer them personal opportunities to interact with locals and tourists and have conversations about the art of wine-making — a place to taste, talk and enjoy.

"Art Uncorked" is the in-progress launch of what may become a regular pairing between AAI and Middle Ridge, creating one more reason to draw tourists to Idyllwild as one of the top 100 art towns in the U.S. The event begins on Saturday with an art show in the new Middle Ridge location from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. An artist reception from 6 to 7:30 p.m., open to the public, will premiere Middle Ridge's newest wine, "Lily Rock Cellars," the newest vintage of its very popular Pinot Grigio, and tastings from local restaurants.

AAI describes the weekend as an interactive art experience featuring Idyllwild's first "pop-up" art gallery; a judged art show celebrating exhibiting artists, with Robert Silva as guest judge; AAI's popular "Under $100 Art Gallery;" an "Under Construction" exhibit, mirroring Middle Ridge's ongoing tasting room construction that will display artwork in progress; live demonstrations by member artists; artists creating art both at Middle Ridge and at nine other participating town galleries; and a fundraising drive to raise money for AAI student memberships.

As of this writing, 29 artists are participating in the event but that number will grow, said AAI organizers. Online registration for the event closes at 5 p.m. Wednesday, July 15. Participating artists must be AAI members. For more details about artist participation, or to join AAI, visit www.artinidyllwild.org.

Marshall Smith can be reached at marshall@towncrier.com.

2013. "The first year we had three events — August, September and October — with 13 participating artists," said Finnell. He explained that the event expanded to six months, May through October, in 2014 with 37 artists. "Our July 2015 event already has 35 registrants with a week to go," Finnell noted new exhibitors are adding to the ranks of approved exhibitors on a regular basis. "We have four new exhibitors for July. With the current layout [of the Community Park site] we could max out at 42 to 44 artists.

"The intent was and still is for local artists to have a venue to show and sell their work," said Scott. "It's a juried show. Before anyone can exhibit, a five-member jury reviews and approves their work for showing. It adds quality control to the event."

Scott said each 2nd Saturday features a musician. "Not too amplified," he stressed, "but enough to provide some pleasant background music. And we pay the musicians, we don't ask them to do it for free."

He credited the Idyllwild Community Park setting, the music and the participating artists with creating a colorful and vital experience for all attendees.

The Finnells are originally from Brawley where Kim taught fifth and sixth grade and Scott worked with his father in a petroleum distribution business that served both the agriculture and construction industries. The couple first became aware of Idyllwild when Kim brought her sixth-grade class, including her son, to Astrocamp for a field trip 20 years ago. "We fell in love with this little town," said

Scott. "We rented for five summers, then purchased a second home 10 years ago. We've been here now for five years as full-time residents."

Both Finnells are passionate about advancing the Idyllwild art scene, but were not themselves artists. Scott explained, "I think I've always had an artistic bent, but being in the corporate world for my career, my left brain dominated. But then I created this stained glass panel for our home. That was pretty successful and my art just grew from there."

Now Scott works on commission creating both stained glass windows and doors as well as fused or "warm" glass-art pieces. "This isn't about me though," he said. "I love art and want to promote it and to help grow this town back to what it was before the economic downturn."

2nd Saturday is held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. the second Saturday of the month from May through October.

Linda Fuller next Throwback lecturer

BY SALLY HEDBERG
SPECIAL TO THE TOWN CRIER

Linda Fuller, beloved art teacher, is the third speaker in the Throwback Summer Lecture Series to be held at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, July 15, at the Krone Library on the Idyllwild Arts campus. The idea of the lectures is to learn about and celebrate the past 70 years of this successful, creative arts academy.

Linda first came to the Idyllwild School of Music and the Arts (ISOMATA), the school's original name, in the 1980s. Her husband, Michael Fuller, taught theater there. The Children's Center director was Althea Pratt. She asked Linda to be an art teacher for the center. "I was so afraid she was just hiring me because of my husband that I insisted on giving her my résumé and doing a demonstration with the children before I was hired," Linda said.

Linda's credentials are many. After graduating from the University of California, Berkeley, she received her master's degree in art at the Otis College of Art and Design in Los Angeles, studying under the famous painter Charles White. "He was very grueling and disciplined, but he taught me how to work with people." She uses these skills when she gives workshops and teaches art throughout the United States.

While her summer is spent at the Children's Center teaching art to children under high school age, the rest of the year she is working at the 92nd Street Y, a world-class cultural and community center in New York City, the L.A. Museum of Art or consulting. She was a teacher at Crossroads School for Art and Science where she taught the son of world-prominent artist, Sam Francis, who gave her many opportunities to share her artistic talents.

Linda will show many pictures of the people she knew and admired at ISOMATA as well as the stories that accompany them at the talk, including famous sculptor and the school's first ceramic teacher Lora Steere. "She was in her 90s when I told my students that we would be going from the school through the meadow to visit her at her cabin," Linda said. "The boys were nudging each other and the girls were fidgety. We were working in clay, and I thought they might want to meet her, but they clearly wanted to stay and do art. As we proceeded to walk through the meadow we saw her sitting and waiting for us. She had the children sit around her while she demonstrated how to take apart a mold. The kids were entranced. Afterwards she invited them in for cookies and lemonade. As we walked back, the students asked when are we going to see Mrs. Steere again?"

She also remembers when Bea Krone, one of the founders of ISOMATA, came to the Children's Center. "We were making life-size stuffed people. Bea came and sat right in the middle of the people. The students were delighted." Linda's students designed and made costumes for Shirley Robbins' Renaissance productions.

One of her students was Nate Lowman, son of Bill Lowman, the Academy's founding president. "Nate did not want to take art. He took a stick and fiddled with it in

Ernest Siva was first at Throwback lectures

BY SALLY HEDBERG
SPECIAL TO THE TOWN CRIER

Although the lead time was too short to publish a story about Dr. Ernest Siva before his lecture, the stories he related about his time at the Idyllwild School of Music and the Arts (now Idyllwild Arts) from 1953 to the present are valuable historic information.

Ernest, a Cahuilla/Serrano Indian, was a saxophone player in the Banning High School band. In the 1950s, the band was asked to come to ISOMATA to play for a school dance. He had never been up to the mountain even though he grew up on the Morongo Indian Reservation nearby. He knew he had musical talent. As a child he sent his saved cereal box tops off to get a harmonica, his first instrument.

In the summer of 1953, he was enrolled as student on a scholarship. "This was an eye opener," he said. "I was considered a pretty good musician at Banning High, but suddenly I was with students from all over, including Hollywood. Many of their parents were musicians so the kids were already classically trained."

He remembers the summer when Pete Seeger came up. "We were at 'Hoot,' a musical gathering, when Seeger came up to me. I was just this Indian kid lying on my back looking at the sky. He asked me, 'Do you sing?' I didn't know if I could, I had never sung before. It was the dirt. I gave him some wood and started him on a project. Bill jokingly tells me, 'Linda, you are the reason my son is a successful artist today.'" Today Nate is nationally known professional artist.

Linda said art for younger children is more important today than ever. With all of the technological gadgets they are exposed to, kids don't have experience with hands-on materials. Art is dwindling in the schools. She exposes them to all kinds of materials, gives them the license to be free to use their own originality, gives guidance when needed and lets them do the problem solving.

This has been her mantra for 20-plus years. She loves the school, the people, the surroundings and the openness. Kids come here ready to do art.

The final lecture of the Throwback Summer Lecture Series features the Academy's founding president, Bill Lowman, at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, July 22, in the Krone Library.

Search for history of parade leads to old-timer talks

BY WENDY WATTS
SPECIAL TO THE TOWN CRIER

First of all, there really wasn't a plan for part two. I thought I was done but here I am writing about this subject again.

It started after I wrote an article for the Town Crier's other publication, Palms to Pines Magazine, last May. It was titled "Idyllwild's Patriotic Parade" and it spoke of the history and the long-standing tradition it brings.

Originally, I interviewed Bob Parish, parade chair. He told me a story of how in early 1960s the idea of the parade began with a "little boy in a Radio Flyer Wagon with an American flag being led by his parents." It was such a sweet story and being a big history buff, I was curious to know if in fact the boy or his family still reside here.

So I started with Bob Smith of the Idyllwild Area Historical Society in hopes of finding a picture to work from. I was told one wasn't available. So armed with just a story and curiosity, I began to ask around of anyone in my path. As I was volunteering at the Idyllwild Public Library, I struck up a conversation with Library Assistant Susan Righetti who organizes children's events throughout the year.

Susan moved here in 1974 with her husband and raised her family here. She talked about how her children spent their entire school days here and then joked about them being "Hillbillies," the affectionate term given to kids who have attended all grades at Idyllwild School. With this much history in town, I thought for sure she could steer me in the right direction. Well, that she did. Though he was only 50 feet away in the next room, he was a lead, nonetheless.

I met Warren Monroe, one of many dedicated volunteers. He couldn't recall anything of the moment I spoke of, but he did begin to tell me the story of the parade that almost never was. He was referring to the Bee Canyon Fire that took place in July 1996 in which evacuations affected a range of 5,000 to 12,000 people and which was 100-percent contained late on July 4.

He told about how the parade itself still went on but in its own unique way. The next day, a couple of locals where spotted on a shop roof in town waving a large American flag in salute of fire trucks and firefighters who rode down the street in front of the parade that year. He then said proudly, "The town just came together and we had a potluck with tables made of saw horses and plywood."

After that he recommended I go see Bud Hunt. He is famous for the local Bike Route Shop and his long Brothers Steve (left) and Jay Johnson are seen here in the middle of restocking and renovating their historic Village Market on Highway 243. history in town, so I thought I might have better luck. I arrived on Lower Pine Crest Avenue and was greeted warmly by Bud who talked about how much fun the yearly tradition was and that it was common for some of the townspeople to say, "It starts at 10. Let's all get up and get in the parade." But he confessed he couldn't recall anything of how the first parade started, so he gave me a few more names of locals who might have known. My new leads led me to the home of Lloyd and Shirley Wood.

Again, only in Idyllwild could you walk up to somebody's house on a lazy Sunday and ask a bunch of questions. What I didn't know was I was about to meet another piece of the puzzle that is Idyllwild. With Shirley arriving here in 1936 and Lloyd in 1946, they've spent most of their lives here. Shirley, 87, invited me to sit on her front porch and recalled her life and what it meant to them to have, "not left [Idyllwild] at all." Then she added, "We stayed the whole time doing what we had to do to make ends meet."

She then talked about how Lloyd and his father dug pipelines to begin the ability to provide water to Pine Cove. Then without a memory of the particular parade I was speaking of, she hugged me and then I was on my way to the next person.

So I ended up at Village Properties and went in search of Jackie Kretsinger. I told her my story of what I was searching for. I asked her how she came to live here. She told me she had moved here in 1963 right after high school and began working at the Koffee Cup, now The Red Kettle. She married her husband, George, and raised two children here and has been here ever since. "Idyllwild is great town to be in love," she said as she celebrates 52 years married.

I was starting to believe I might not find my answer. But with that said I was pretty happy with the idea that I had met new people and learned history I didn't know three weeks ago. I said goodbye and started to leave to my next lead when Jackie asked, "Hey, did you say Radio Red Flyer wagon? I remember Eleanor used to drag Steve and Jay along in a red wagon as she was working."

She was speaking of the Johnson family who most locals know were instrumental in contributing to the Idyllwild we know today. I discovered that the Jerry and Eleanor Johnson had purchased their first home right there on North Circle Dr. (the current parade route) So it all made perfect sense. I could see where Eleanor could have been toting her grandchildren down the street and a little boy is waving a flag innocently enough and then a parade is born.

I already had Jay's contact info from my past work at Town Hall. His family donated the land it stands on in 1946. I gave him a call with my possible theory and he laughed and said, "I think it was my brother, Steve." I reached him and met up with him at Village Market where their family was in the middle of new renovations. Steve then confirmed what I was hoping — that he was 5 in 1963, making it very possible he was whom I was seeking.

I asked him what memories he had of the parades. He told a story of when his Grandma bought him, his brother and cousins "Mickey Bikes" (motor-styled bikes) when they were little. He then smiled and said, "We would take crepe paper and decorate them and then we almost got ticketed by CHP for driving them down the route." So am I 100-percent sure Steve is the little kid that helped start it all? I really don't think I need to be completely.

Did you know at least three men believed they were the "Kissing Sailor" in the iconic picture of a gentleman dipping a woman with a kiss at the end of World War II? So with that said, I believe the important thing is that a boy and his wagon created a story memorable enough that it is still being passed down 55 years later and helped create another tradition for Idyllwild.

in my bones, but I hadn't grown into it yet. Then Bob Holmes heard me speak and recognized the tenor sound from my voice. He needed a tenor as part of his choral group. I gave up the sax and became a singer."

He began to record and teach others his native family songs such as "Little Bear" and "Dragon Fly." His family was the last of the traditional practitioners, and he didn't want to lose the songs or the language. Later, he was able to teach these songs to his students during his practice teaching at Beverly Hills High and then as a music teacher at Raymond Cree Middle School in Palm Springs.

Something miraculous happened when Ernie was in Idyllwild. He knew his Siva ancestors had walked from the desert to somewhere in the mountains to get away from the hot summers. While on a hike with Archaeologist Dan McCarthy, he was able to retrace his ancestors' steps to their original desert village 11 miles from Pinon Pines.

The insight gained from his experience at ISOMA-

TA led to furthering his education at the University of Southern California where he obtained his bachelor's degree in Music Education and his master's in Choral Music. Later, he was presented with an honorary doctorate of Fine Arts from the University of California, San Bernardino.

He and his wife, June, founded the Dorothy Ramon Learning Center in downtown Banning. This center offers lectures and once-a-month concerts. Interns from UCSB are working in the library and researching the cultures of all Southern California tribes, thus enhancing Ernest's dream of revitalizing his own Native American culture. He continues to teach Native American flute making as part of the Native American Arts Festival held at IA each summer. He serves on the IA Foundation Board of Trustees. He gives back by providing scholarships to students on the reservation to continue with music.

Ernest shares his knowledge through story telling and music. He sings and dances with the Mt. Cahuilla Bird Singers. Bob Krone, son of the school's founders, and member of the first graduating class in 1950, said, "Ernest is one of the best we ever had."

Steele's 11th-hour heartbreak at the French Open

Earns berth in the Scottish

By JACK CLARK
PRO GOLF CORRESPONDENT

At the French Open last week, Brendan Steele was closing in on a well-earned trip to The (British) Open at St. Andrews in two weeks, but the golf gods had other ideas. A ball in the water, and the native Idyllwilder triple-bogeyed the 71st hole, a par 4.

Brendan did come back to birdie the 72nd and final hole, but he pulled up two strokes shy of the Major tournament at St. Andrews. Had he only bogeyed the 71st hole instead of tripling it, he would have finished alone in fifth place and won a spot in The Open.

Such are the brutal realities of top-flight professional golf. Montreal Super-fan André Pilon perhaps put it best when he emailed Brendan afterward to tell him that these are hard hits to take, but a champion always fights his way back.

And there is no doubt that Brendan will be back.

For the tournament, he posted a 4-under par 72-69-67-72 — 280 to earn a fine tie for sixth. He won no FedExCup points for this high finish because the Alstom Open de France is a PGA European Tour tournament rather than a (U.S.) PGA Tour event.

Although the French Open will not count in official PGA Tour statistics, it was his fourth top-10 and ninth top-25 finish of this season, and he moved from 98th up to 92nd in the Official World Golf Rankings. He's made 16 cuts in 19 starts this season.

After finishing at the French Open on Sunday, Brendan told the Town Crier he intended to play this week in the Scottish Open at the Gullane Golf Club in Gullane, a small town about the size of Idyllwild, near Edinburgh, Scotland. The Scottish Open website relates that Brendan's top-10 finish in the French Open has earned him a berth in the Scottish. So he still could gain entry to The Open with a high finish at Gullane; entries in The Open go to the leading three players (not otherwise exempt) who finish in the top 10 and ties at the Scottish Open.

Brendan tees off Thursday at 6:40 a.m. PDT and Friday at 12:50 a.m. and Friday at 12:50 a.m. PDT. You can follow Brendan's score, hole by hole, on the live leaderboard at the europeantour.com website. Of course, the Town Crier's app and website will publish a summary of Brendan's play after each round.

Jack Clark may be reached at jack@towncrier.com.

CREATURE CORNER

BY MIMI AND HOOTCH

Hurray for Scarlett. The gray kitten has gone to her forever home.

Peanut, also known as Paco, is a 5-year-young male Chihuahua. Despite all the commotion during the parade and festival, he still remained calm and relaxed. Peanut is good with other dogs, but size seems to intimidate him a bit. He is great with the feline crowd. Paco would do well in a home without small children as they seem to intimidate him, too. Besides that, he's not a barker ... not one peep during the whole parade. He loves the leash, but most of all, Peanut would love a lap, or a purse. What a love this boy is. Escape artist, though. So secure environment is a must.

How can you resist? Don't miss out on the kitten fun. These two little kittens are patiently waiting for you. No more June gloom, because they will keep you smiling with their kitten antics all through the month. The gray is a male with the great name of Brett and the tiger-striped is a male from another litter whose name is Gatsby. He lost his mama, so the brother and sisters' Mom stepped in to care for him as one of her own. So they call him their step-brother. Call ARF to make an appointment to visit. All kittens are litter-box trained, good eaters and not vocal.

Sunny (below) is looking for a new home. She is about 6 years young and a great mouser. She has been accustomed to indoor/outdoor. She likes to venture out the door, but prefers to stay inside at night. Sunny needs a home ASAP.

ARF has many cats available for adoption or fostering.

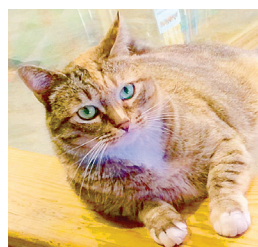

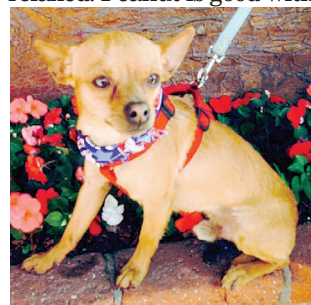

Go to www.arfidyllwild.weebly.com and click on Petfinder. There is also a link for Facebook.

All pets are spayed, neutered and current on shots.

ARF is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sundays.

Every day throughout the United States, newspapers publish thousands of public notices about events, conditions or actions that affect countless individuals, families, neighborhoods and businesses. Public notices cover many topics, including business matters, liquor licensing, public auctions and sales, estates, zoning, public meetings, bids to sell goods and services to the government, local government finances and state and local elections. Public notice is a fundamental component of our system of representative democracy, which depends upon the participation of educated, responsible citizens.

HOROSCOPES

July 2015 — Week 2

March 21 – April 19

Darn, Aries. Just when you think you've got a handle on things at work, you're given new responsibilities. Delegation is key. A friend gets frank with you.

April 20 – May 20

Perfection is highly desired but rarely attained. Do your best, reach for the stars, but don't be disappointed if you fall short. It happens, Taurus, more than you realize.

May 21 – June 21

Competition is heating up at home. Bring it on, Gemini! A neighbor drops by for a few too many visits. Make yourself scarce and give them the hint.

June 22 – July 22

Judge not, Cancer. You were young once, too. Blame less and guide more. A document reappears in the most unexpected of places. Ask questions later.

July 23– August 22

Lunatic you are not, Leo, but your behavior this week may make some wonder. Some risks are worth taking. It is as simple as that!

August 23– September 22

The fog lifts at home, and progress is made. Hooray, Virgo. A crass remark from a friend reveals the need to consult a professional.

September 23– October 22

Lady luck smiles on you, and you win big. Enjoy, Libra. A run-in with an old acquaintance uncovers an amazing opportunity. Go for it!

October 23– November 21

Too much, too little. There has to be a happy medium. Look for it, Scorpio. A film inspires introspection and meditation. Ah-ha! You've got it now.

November 22– December 21

Presto, Sagittarius. You see, you do, and you conquer. It's quick, simple and painless. Health and fitness goals are revamped. Go, go, go!

December 22 – January 19

Clean-up time, Capricorn. You may not have made the mess, but you will most certainly have to clean it up in order to move forward. A pal helps.

January 20 – February 18

Money is always a worry, even with savings and small windfalls. Surely there is a better way, Aquarius. Look to a longtime mentor for the answer.

February 19 – March 20

Face the facts, Pisces. What someone thinks and says are two different things. They could very well be trying to pull the wool over your eyes.

Obituary: Darline A. Penhalurick 1915-2015

Darline passed away Tuesday, June 16, 2015. She was born July 5, 1915, in Lushton, Nebraska. Her early years were spent on a cattle ranch at the Black-hills in Wyoming. Most of her growing years were spent here in Southern California. She married Harold E. Penhalurick in 1939. They have one child, Alice P. Lindsey.

She held degrees in education, religion and the library media field, having attended Pasadena College, Maryville College in Tennessee, Whitworth College, University of Hawaii and University of Washington. She began her career teaching in Idaho and Eastern Washington. From teaching English and business education on the high school level, Ms. Penhalurick took time off to pursue a degree in the library media field.

Until she retired in 1976, she served as library media specialist in the Mercer Island School District. During this period in her career, she received several awards and honors, including the Grolier Scholarship of Librarianship, HEW Award, Institute on Asian Studies and a scholarship for the Institute for Library Analyses and Design. Following retirement, she was given the Pace-setters League Award by the Washington Association of Educational Communications and Technology.

As a reward for her association with the World Affairs Council of Seattle and her innovative ideas and practices in the library media field, Ms. Penhalurick was given a 10-month sabbatical to make a goodwill tour around the world, visiting and lecturing in 10 countries.

While living in Washington, she would vacation in Pacific Beach, Washington. Upon retirement in 1978, she was asked to write articles for a publication entitled "The Beach Guide." Having a deep rapport and love for the ocean, she then wrote "The Sea and Me."

In the 1980s, she and her husband, Dr. Harold Penhalurick, retired synod executive for the Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., would "snowbird" to Golden Village in Hemet. They later moved to The Village. While there, she continued her love of painting. She had several art shows in Hemet.

In 1989, she and Harold bought a home in Idyllwild. She loved watching the seasonal changes the mountain presented. Gathering her thoughts about her observations, she wrote "The Mountain and Me" in 2006.

Memorial services will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, July 18, at the Community Presbyterian Church. Reception will follow.

Sunny

good things said about Sunny's presence at the Nature Center are true — she was an excellent mouser, greeter and ambassador — there were health issues that were insurmountable.

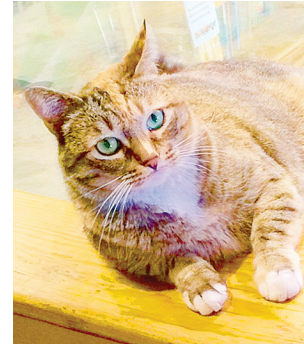

Specifically, the problem was the presence of animals in food-preparation areas. Sunny was used to the run of the Nature Center, inside and out, and she was exposed to her litter box, rodents and other animals. Her presence in the kitchen exposed food preparation areas and employees (and sometimes caterers) to unhealthful contamination.

Herron noted that the county's Department of Environmental Health food facility, self-inspection checklist, which can be found online, contains the entry that "Live animals, birds, or fowl are not located in the food preparation area." A disease called toxoplasmosis, which can be contracted by cats from eating infected rodents, can be transmitted to humans by cats, he added.

Herron stated that he himself saw Sunny on food-preparation surfaces at the Nature Center. He said the staff tried intermediate measures, such as restricting Sunny from both the outdoors and the kitchen, but those measures just weren't practicable because of the constant human activity, coming and going. He saw Sunny outdoors several times after the indoors-only decision had been made, he said, and keeping her out of the kitchen was not practicable.

Herron said this situation was brought to his attention by a concerned citizen when he declined to identify. Herron said he issued the directive that there would no longer be resident cats at the Nature Center. He also said that "more conventional" means of rodent control would now be employed at the Nature Center.

Chris Martin, who is involved in leading a "Save Sunny!" movement, takes issue with many of Herron's statements. He acknowledges that the health issues raised by Herron have theoretical substance, but states they are without practical merit. Martin said the opposition to Sunny is "based on a bunch of lunatic what-ifs" that are not real problems. He says that everything Herron can find on the Internet that opposes Sunny, he can find a counter for on the Internet.

Martin says Sunny has been at the Nature Center for five years and that other cats were there before Sunny, yet there has never been a reported human illness associated with them. Martin suspects the real motive behind the citizen complaint against Sunny is something else — perhaps a cat allergy, or a concern for birds or some other reason. "What's the real agenda, here?" he asks. He is not willing to identify the citizen complainant.

Martin points out that squirrels are known to occasionally carry the plague, and asks, "Are they going to ban squirrels from the Nature Center next? It's sad that one person is dictating the policy at the Nature Center."

The Town Crier contacted Sue Nash, who confirmed that she had written a letter about a year ago about the Sunny-access-to-the-Nature-Center situation, and that more recently she had called the county and filed a formal complaint.

Nash has heard many rumors regarding her involvement in this matter and says she has been harassed in town about it. She says that many of the rumors are not true. "I don't have an agenda," she said. Nash, a licensed attorney, said, "I didn't threaten to sue anyone. I'm a concerned citizen, that's all."

Nash said she knew of no case of human illness due to contact with any of the cats who have lived at the Nature Center, but says that is not the point. You don't want to wait until someone gets sick. "It's a 'no brainer,'" she said. "You don't want animals walking around in food-preparation areas. It's a simple public-health matter."

"I'm not the one making the decision," Nash said. "I brought it to the attention of county officials, and that's it. I have no power to do anything. I'll just sit back and see what they do."

Meanwhile, Sunny is in the care of ARF, whose sole involvement is in attempting to find her a loving home. Anyone interested may contact ARF at 951-659-1122.
