Cranston fires burn 20 acres

By J.P. Crumrine EDITOR

The Cranston Fire was reported about 1 p.m. Sunday, July 1. By the time the U.S. Forest Service had the fire contained, 20 acres had burned.

Six separate fires, along both sides of Highway 74, just east of the Forest Service's Cranston Station were found. Four of the six were very small. The fire was fully contained late Sunday night, according to Carol Underhill, the Forest Service information officer.

The cause of the fire is under investigation.

For several hours, Highway 74 was closed to all traffic from Valle Vista to Mountain Center, while the firefighters fought the blazes.

CAL FIRE air resources and some engine crews aided the Forest Service efforts during the afternoon and evening.

Forest Service Battalion Chief Greg Ross was the incident commander.

Volunteers receive mileage assistance for trips provided to eligible people, currently at a rate of 32 cents a mile. Richard Smith, Independent Living Partnership executive director and TRIP general manager, said TRIP is already serving Idyllwild residents. In the program, riders choose their own drivers, usually friends or neighbors with whom they feel secure and comfortable. Riders schedule rides as needed with their volunteer drivers and the program's database records the assistance and issues mileage reimbursements.

Smith pointed out that users of TRIP report their quality of life and overall health and happiness improve because of the program.

"By the end of this year, TRIP Riverside will have provided nearly 100,000 trips for people who would not have had adequate health service access or, in some cases, would not have been able to continue to live in their own homes. Travel with volunteer escorts of their choice is free to TRIP riders. What makes TRIP different from other volunteer drivers programs is the belief that older adults can be self-reliant when given the tools that are needed." The atmosphere was fun and festive although much of the information delivered was cautionary and designed to improve seniors' quality of life, emergency preparedness and protection from scam artists and con artists that target seniors. Speakers included Office of Aging's Assistant Director Michele Wilham who spoke about aging well and living longer; Ryan Uhlenkott, regional manager of Adult Protective Services, who spoke on preventing and reporting abuse, fraud and neglect of older adults; and Zuzzette Bricker and Alia Rodriguez from OES who discussed disaster preparedness on a budget. Complimentary starter disaster preparedness kits for seniors were distributed.

In introductory remarks, Stone, a pharmacist by training and trade, spoke of the county's multi-agency coordination in providing information and services to its older adults. He characterized the Office on Aging as the gatekeeper for issues affecting seniors, the place to start to find assistance for a broad range of issues.

county's activity in recovering money on behalf of elderly fraud victims. Adult Protective Services CARE (Curtailing Abuse Related to the Elderly) program, working with the county's district attorney has recovered $39,485,000 of defrauded seniors' money and saved $53,220,000 of seniors' funds from being taken by fraud through intervention actions.

INITIAL THOUGHTS

Town Crier The freedom of independence ...

Happy Fourth of July, or as Marshall reminds me, Independence Day. It was 236 years ago that the residents of the colonies decided that they knew a better way to govern themselves and their neighbors than their English overseers.

Cherish this independence because many people on the planet envy us, desire it or have no idea of its value.

We honor Memorial Day and Veterans Day because of this independence.

While the flags, banners and bunting remind us of our heritage, they are just Rather, it's the actions we have, and often take for granted, that demonstrate the value of government.

Free elections, freedom of religion, free speech, freedom of assembly, freedom to avoid self-incrimination, freedom from double jeopardy and unreasonable search and seizure, the right to bear arms, the right to due process, and, especially, a free press are a few of our special rights.

For example, see how many letters to the editor we received, coincidentally this week.

Martha Snyder's opinion piece last week about closing Idyllwild Pines Camp to the community provoked several letters. But here in the U.S., she has a right to manage the camp, and our readers have the right to agree or to disagree and to express those thoughts.

The change in the Idyllwild librarian is another issue which has caught local attention. Please note that County Librarian Barbara Morrow Williams has shared her thoughts.

But understand that day-to-day management of the Riverside County libraries has been contracted to Library Systems and Services, Inc. The librarians are not county employees.

This is no different than the situation at the Transfer Station. While the Riverside County Waste Management Department owns the land, it contracts with Waste Management Corporation to run the facility.

Re: Closure of Idyllwild Pines Camp — 1

Editor:

I have no vested interest in the border closings at Idyllwild Pines Camp, but the new owner or manager of the camp seems unfriendly to me.

I've never walked in the camp grounds but I know many local neighbors who have done that for decades, for generations, with no apparent ill effect. Students at Idyllwild School who cut through the camp must now tread the possibly lethal streets to reach school? This is a good thing? This is protecting children?

The only people who obey unneighborly "no trespassing" signs or fences are the law-abiding folks. Those with foul intentions will pay no heed.

In fact, as Idyllwild Pines keeps out the good folks they isolate themselves and become more vulnerable to predation. There is protection in the company of good citizens. Unknown vandals are just that — unknown. But surely the locals who walk there every day and so appreciate the loveliness are not unknown.

mostly enjoy in Idyllwild. A huge section of land in the heart of the town has now been placed out of bounds for all.

The owner of the camp might compare herself to Mr. Horace Hahn who helped rock climbers avoid the lengthy Deep Springs Trail to Suicide Rock by building an alternate route at his own expense across his property to the Rock Climbers' Trail. This is public-spirit.

I know some of the women who walked the outskirts of Idyllwild Pines and they count among the most hardworking, generous-minded, contributing and giving people in Idyllwild. They are not "strangers" who bring 'danger." How silly. They all pick up after their dogs, and some of them pick up other trash as well, trash perhaps left by campers.

I don't imagine this action will stop vandalism and it won't endear the owner to many honest Idyllwild residents.

I would assume that child campers have counselors and the camp has security personnel and that their young clients aren't unattended, right?

I wish Idyllwild Pines to This is very much not in reconsider their actions and the spirit of inclusiveness we embrace the tradition and personality of this peaceful, quiet community. This can lead to a spirit of good will and sharing rather than one of exclusion.

I know most people of Idyllwild will do their very best to help the camp achieve its goals of safety. A compromise could easily be worked out toward a happy ending.

If Ms. Snyder [Executive Director of Idyllwild Pines Camp] intended to alienate the community, give her an "A+." She is not the "we" of the 89-year-old Idyllwild Pines Camp. The "we" welcomed neighbors.

The "No Trespassing" signs appeared at the southeast end after a complaint was made against the camp for destruction of natural habitat.

It is the camp's responsibility to supervise the children at all times. A dog walker, biker, fisherman or artist who come to enjoy one of the most feature-rich environments in Idyllwild causes no danger to chil-

Re: Closure of Idyllwild Pines Camp — 3

For more than a decade, it has been my joy, nearly every day, to walk the path along beautiful Strawberry Creek from Delano to town and back with my dog, who loved our outings as much as I did.

When I saw the "Private Property" signs that went up at Idyllwild Pines Camp, I felt deep dismay and disappointment.

It seems quite unlikely to be a coincidence that Idyllwild Pines posted those signs just days after neighbors and I were stunned to see and hear a bulldozer on the property that was wiping out the nests of countless birds and the homes of countless small mammals. I couldn't believe that any legal authority had allowed such wholesale destruction of riparian habitat to take place, especially not in springtime. (As far as I know, there were no permits issued.)

Neighbors expressed their concern; so, closing off access to paths that previously were open feels like retaliation.

Question: Is it really legal to close off access to a waterway that is routinely stocked with fish by the state of California, paid for by taxpayers? Two Fish and Game guys told me the answer is "No," but I haven't seen it in writing yet.

BEFORE OUR TIME

By Robert B. Smith

An old tradition my forebears brought from Britain is the habit of bestowing names on their homes. It reached Idyllwild in the 1920s to such an extent that one issue of the Idyllwild Breezes newspaper carried a two-column poem, anonymously composed (possibly by Editor Joyce Carmichael), incorporating nearly forty examples.

Most commonly, these early house names embraced some feature of the natural landscape, such as vegetation ("Wayside Cedars," "Burley Oak," "Happy Oaks," "Whispering Pines," "Pine Nook," "Seven Pines," "Fern Haven"), or waterways ("Spring-Brook," "Shadowbrook") or both ("Alderbrook"). The local granite appeared in "Gray Boulders."

A few owners advertised family origins: "Skogs Villan" (Swedish for "Forest Villa"), "Bide-a-Wee" ("Stay a While," to Scots), and "Deseo del Corazon" (a Spanish "Heart's Desire"). And there was the inevitable synthetic blend ("Casa Woodwardia").

Lifestyles showed up in "Lazy Lodge," "Camp-In," "Cozy Nook," "Trails End," and "The Biltmore" (so named because it seemed to acquire an addition annually).

Some literary allusions turned up: "The House by the Side of the Road" and "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Less obvious was "The Chocolate Drop," either an expression of personal taste or a commercial reference, given its location next door to the Idyllwild Inn.

And some simply opted for advertising the owner, as in "House of Bosworth," or more creatively in "Eloc Lodge," reversing the Cole family name.

Today, the naming tradition persists, and even casual observation harvests a satisfying crop of labels. Contemporary owners show a distinctly more creative bent. The use of a family name, for instance, is widespread, but now commonly coupled with an alliterative or rhyming noun, as in "Hoss's Hideaway," "Byers' Back Lot," or "Allgeier's Shire." The variety of nouns seems endless: den, corner, lodge, cabin, place, creekside, lair, chalet, cottage, even lily

Among the more creative are "Cort House," "Dave's Awaysis," and "Webb Site." A family pet gained ownership in "Ruff Catt Lodge."

Natural features continue to be popular: "Moon Mist," "Sunnydale," "Stonybrook," "Brooksong," "Creek Cottage," "Pine Nest," "Lily Vista," "Happy Rock," "Tree House," "Timberest," "Wind-Song," and the apt but overused "On the Rocks."

Foreign expressions now reach further afield. There is a "Casa de Calma," but also "Ki-I-Wah" (helpfully translated from native tongue by the owner as "The Place That Waits For You"), and "Dom Tatry" (apparently evoking a house in the northern mountains of Slovakia).

Variations on our village's name abound: "Idyll Eagle's Nest," "Hide Awhile," "Idyll-a-while," even "Wylld Lily

When it comes to lifestyle we may find ultimate peace in "Nirvana," "A Bit of Heaven," or "Mountain Om." Then it's back down to earth with "Hodgepodgelodge," "Daisy Digger Lodge," and "Whistling Pig Retreat." A touch of See Before, page 23

FIRE AND FOREST

By MIKE ESNARD, Mountain Communities Fire Safe Council PRESIDENT

Fire season roaring, roofing grant ready

They had to evacuate the Air Force Academy. You don't normally think of an imposing military academy in danger of destruction by wildfire, but this past week the academy in Colorado Springs was in exactly that position.

Last year it was Texas setting records for fires; now Colorado is rewriting its fire record books. Nine major fires were burning in the state at the end of June. A record 259 homes were just destroyed by the High Park Fire, which burned over 87,000 acres to the west of Ft. Collins. Within a week this record was reset by the Waldo Canyon Fire, burning to the west of Colorado Springs, and which burned 347 homes and caused the evacuation of over 35,000 people.

This is not a surprise for people following these issues. The tree mortality in the Rockies, spurred on by the increasingly hot and dry climate and the activity of the bark beetle, has been a subject of conversation for years. Major fires are also burning in New Mexico, Montana, Utah, and Wyoming.

Overstocked forests are loaded with dry fuel and are prescription for large fires. Estimates of forests before European settlement run between 40 to 80 trees per acre. Now they often have as many as 1,000 trees per acre.

The question is what to do about it.

Waiting for huge forest fires seems the least intelligent option. Prevention, as is usually the case, seems the wisest. Every time I read about the firefighting costs of these large fires I think of how much forest thinning could have been accomplished with just that money alone. I say "just that money" because the costs of large fires far exceed the firefighting costs. The recent firefighting cost as of June in Colorado was $40 million. (It will go higher.) You can do a lot of fuel reduction with $40 million.

On a happier note, I am very pleased to announce that the Mountain Communities Fire Safe Council has received final approval for a grant from the Federal Emergency Management Agency to replace wood roofs on the Hill. Work to obtain this grant started in the fall of 2009, so it is a testament to the perseverance of Executive Director Edwina Scott and others at the council that we finally were given the go-ahead for the project.

These are federal funds that come through the California Emergency Management Agency and are administered through Riverside County's Office of Emergency Management.

Under this project, any homeowner with a wood shake or shingle roof can replace the roof with a class A fire resistant roof and be reimbursed for 75 percent of the cost, up to $8,400. The homeowner can choose a See Fire, page 23 minds residents and visitors that fireworks are illegal in Riverside County; meaning that you may not sell, purchase, transport, store or use fireworks in the county.

The cities of Blythe, Coachella, Cathedral City, Desert Hot Springs and Indio are the only cities that allow the sale and use of state fire marshal approved "Safe and Sane" fireworks. Fireworks purchased in these cities must not be transported, used or possessed outside of the cities in which they were purchased.

All fireworks, including sparklers, are illegal in Riverside County because they cause serious injuries and very often, start fires.

Any person that causes a wildland fire by using illegal fireworks will be held responsible for all fire suppression costs. These costs can run into the millions of dollars.

Idyllwild Fire studying patient satisfaction data

Commissioner Schelly resigns from paid call firefighters was sent to Idvllwild Fire Department interim Chief Mike Sherman. Commissioner Schelly read it aloud at IFPD's June 26 meeting.

CHIEF SHERMAN:

After 16 years of grateful service, I submit this as my retirement notice effective May 31, 2012.

As I look back, I am thankful to all the people that encouraged and taught me how to serve this community. Ken Menz was the first one to invite me to participate as a volunteer firefighter in May 1996.

Capt. Jim Manietta taught the night classes in the station bay to receive EMT-I certification. Then there was a year of training with Capt. Terry Nielson resulting in a State Fire Marshal firefighter 1 (FF1) certificate in October

These steps were preceded by one of the most interesting interviews I have ever had in my life. Sitting before me in the hot crowded old training room were four men of immense

> Well if you are asking me to do medical calls that's no problem," (my confidence in patient care was high being a graduate of a doctoral program) "but if you want me to do that (pointing at the poster) I'm not excited about that." They all laughed.

> Capt. Kretzinger said it was a good thing I was afraid of fire. "The day you lose that fear is the day you could get hurt."

> of Idyllwild Firefighters Association and other positions which lead to serving on the Idyllwild Community Fund Board and as President of the Idyllwild School Site Council.

My first 10 years at IFPD were a wonderful mix of driving the big red fire truck, recertifying, 2 a.m. alarms, medical aides, fires and rolling hose. There is camaraderie among our firefighters and many of those who were here on my first day are still here; captains Lott, Muhall and Reyes as well as engineers Mike Yount and Jack Peckham, who had just been hired as a career firefighter from the PCF ranks.

Over the past six years, there has been much change at IFPD. Some of those changes were surprising to put it pleasantly, so I ran for IFPD commissioner in

As providence would have it, California law has an exception for volunteer firefighters to serve on the board while maintaining their volunteer firefighter service. This was not popular with a few but the election results were clear.

Although retiring as a I was elected President PCF, I will continue to serve as an IFPD commissioner. My focus today is still the campaign points made in

- 1. Post more on the IFPD website;
- 2. Decrease our bud-
- 3. Reduce the parcel fees;
- 4. Increase the fitness level at the department;
- 5. Set and approve policies that reflect the community we serve.

Finally I thank my family for giving up a husband and a father all the nights I was gone, the community for their never ending support of IFPD and the big firefighter upstairs who watches over all of us. God bless IFPD, we need it.

COUNTY CORNER

Vacation Rentals

The Board of Supervisors appointed a subcommittee composed of supervisors Jeff Stone (3rd District) and Bob Buster (1st District) to review the ideas for a proposed vacation home rental ordinance. The ordinance under consideration would apply to and regulate vacation homes being rented out by individual owners, not by management companies that are already county regulated.

The subcommittee is to report back to the board at its Aug. 28 meeting.

Stone has said the demand for overnight stays in the wine country exceeds the number of official rooms available. The noise and volume of renters has become a problem for neighbors of rental homes in other parts of the county.

"There's no oversight," he said. Stone was sensitive to the potential growing demand on the Hill during no later than June 15. events such as the Lemon Lily and Jazz festivals.

"We want uniform enforcement, but need to be careful we're not inhibiting business in the county because three percent are not following the rules," he stressed.

Stone also emphasized that he felt there were other solutions such as better code enforcement before a new ordinance might be needed.

Audit of Auditor

On June 11, the 2011-12 Riverside County grand jury submitted a review of the county's Auditor-Controller's Internal Audit Division to the County Executive Officer. The general observation was the division does not have enough staff to comply with or complete all of its mandates.

The recent audit history of the Idyllwild Fire Protection District was the specific example of how the Audit Division is not serving the county's special districts.

"The Audit Division is not proactively pursuing delinquent audits for special districts, thereby placing at risk the fiduciary responsibility of these special district will be able to view their 2012-13 roll value online at boards that are accountable to taxpayers," the grand jury reported. While IFPD has compete audits through fiscal year 2010-11, the grand jury pointed out that some districts were "habitually delinquent, as much as Internet may call the assessor's office at (951) 955-6200 two to five years in conducting their mandated annual and IFPD. "In the case of one special district, IFPD, the management discussion and analysis were omitted from the report to the Audit Division at the request of the special district board."

According to the grand jury, this omission violated Government Accounting Standard board statement no. 34, "the rights of taxpayers to know the financial status of their district."

The grand jury recommended additional staff for the Audit Division. Also the division should issue reminder letters for audits within six months of the end of the fiscal year, a second letter in April and a final reminder in Riverside County are relatively stable compared to the previous year, the Assessor-County Clerk-Recorder announced today.

County Property Assessments

Overall, the value of assessed property in Riverside County declined by less than 1 percent for fiscal year 2012-13, a $299 million reduction in the countywide assessment roll. The roll for the fiscal year beginning July 1 closed with a total taxable value of $204.8 billion, relatively unchanged from $205.1 billion a year ago.

No community had a change in value greater than 5 percent. Declines continue in some areas.

Under state law, temporary assessment reductions may be made based on a property's value on Jan. 1 of each year. Ward said his office continues to review individual properties for potential reductions in value, which can affect property taxes. The review is a critical process in completing the assessment roll.

Get ready for Native Arts Week at Idyllwild Arts

By Sally Hedberg Contributor

A highlight of the summer is the annual Native American Arts Festival, July 8 to 14, at the Idyllwild Arts Academy. Many free events are open to the public. Each day visiting scholars and artists from all over the United States hold Brown Bag lectures at the Krone Library on campus from noon to 1 p.m. Topics of special interest include Building with Empathy: Homes on the Navajo Reservation, Traditional Indian Medicine, and 300 Miles, Two Weeks with Lakota Teens on the Oomaka Tokatakiya. A daily bonus is tasting Native foods.

Several workshops are offered for a fee. Native American artists provide instruction on weaving, basketry, jewelry, by a Native American on a pottery and flute making. Native American chefs lead cooking workshops that emphasis Native American cuisine using popular Pre-Iberian ingredients and native plants for food and utilitarian purposes. More information can be found on the internet at www.idyllwildarts.org/ workshop-q10467-c10325-Native_American_Arts.aspx or call (951) 659-2171.

This year the festival will honor Katherine Siva Saubel, who died on Nov. 1, 2011, at the age of 91. Fortyfive years ago Dr. Saubel cofounded the Malki Museum in Banning to preserve her Cahuilla culture and traditions. The Malki Museum was the first nonprofit museum founded and managed reservation. Dr. Saubel was born on the Los Coyotes reservation and spoke only Cahuilla when she entered school. She and her family moved to Palm Springs and she was the first Native American to graduate from high school there.

In 1958 Katherine met Lowell Bean, a UCLA graduate student in Ethnology and Anthropology. Lowell describes her as an "academic treasure." Over the years, she was able to collaborate with many renowned anthropologists, linguists and academics to develop a dictionary for the Cahuilla language, many books on Cahuilla cultural history, traditions and practices, including the identification and use of medicinal plants. She also gave countless presentations and testimony on behalf of Cahuilla culture and remained the President of the Malki Museum until the time of her passing.

Dr. Saubel was a scholar, educator, tribal leader and activist. At 6:30 p.m., Sunday, July 9, in the Krone Library, a panel led by Dr. Lowell Bean will present, "Considering the Life & Legacy of Katherine Siva Saubel (1920-2011) through her many collaborations."

The Native American Arts Festival gives Idyllwild residents and visitors a great opportunity to learn about Native American art forms and gain new insights into their contributions to our world culture.

Monday night at the Parks Exhibition Center Roy Talahaftewa, Hopi jeweler and teacher, shared his special techniques of creating with silver and stones. Each unique piece of jewelry he makes tells a historical story about Hopi tradition and culture. Talahaftewa makes all of his own tools needed for his fine carving of the silver and the overlaying of metals. He uses a stone made of volcanic ash for creating a mold for some of his exquisite pieces of jewelry. Photo by Careena Chase

Steele back in the money and off to Paris

By Jack Clark PROFESSIONAL GOLF CORRESPONDENT

After missing the cut two weeks ago in the Travelers Championship in Cromwell, Conn., Brendan Steele last week posted 13-over par 71-76-74-76 — 297 in the AT&T National in Bethesda, Md. He tied for 68th place while earning $13,130 in official prize money.

The Idyllwild native collected 8 birdies against 17 bogeys and two doubles on a tough track on which 2011.

only 14 players broke par. Steele has now earned more $600,000 in official PGA Tour winnings this year, placing him in 101st place on the tour money list and 120th in FedEx Cup points.

He will not have an opportunity to improve in either of these categories this week because he will not be playing in this week's PGA Tour tournament.

Instead, Steele accepted an invitation to play in this year's French Open in Paris, where he tied for 7th place

O. Henry winner Steve Heller at next Authors Series

By Marshall Smith Staff Reporter

O. Henry Award-winning author Steve Heller spent much of his early professional life avoiding what he wanted to do most — write. Heller, who is the next author in Eduardo Santiago's Idyllwild Authors Series, said he knew from the age of 15 that he wanted to be a writer. But even knowing that writing was his passion, Heller said he still delayed submitting his first story for many years.

"For 10 years I'd do everything but write," said Heller. "I'd outline, go on writing retreats, everything. I was terrified of failing at it," said Heller, who now chairs the creative writing Summer bloomers ...

The spring wildflower season has wound down and most of the early bloomers like the penstemon are now covered in seed pods.

The summer bloomers now dominate and this represents an opportunity for yours truly to find some new flowers that I have not encountered erything was lush, green and beautiful. We passed through before. Although I have been interested in the local flora for quite some time, this year I have taken it to a new level.

I am still finding some amazing flowers and the area around Strawberry Creek has probably reached it's peak. On Friday we went on a walk along the creek, going down stream from the bridge on Highway 243 and found a profusion of wild roses, columbine, wild strawberries, thimbleberries, large patches of the daisy like feverfew, wild peas, along with mint and various other herbs and flowers.

The creek was still flowing and as we walked along ev-large patches of ferns and wild roses. On the edges of the stream, we saw American speedwell (Veronica americana) growing right on the waters edge. This small plant has tiny but beautiful blue flowers and is edible, supposedly tasting like watercress.

Next to the speedwell we found wild strawberry plants with both small white flowers and tiny red fruit. Growing next to both plants was a large patch of spearmint. We crushed a mint leaf and the fragrance made me believe in aroma therapy.

The crimson columbine (Aquilegia formosa) seemed to See Outside, page 30

19th Annual Jazz in the Pines weeks away

By J.P. Crumrine EDITOR

Headliners for the 19th Annual Idvllwild Jazz in the Pines will be Gordon Goodwin's Big Phat Band, Saturday, Aug. 25, and Brian Bromberg, Sunday, Aug. 26.

Around these familiar jazz icons, Artistic Director Bubba Jackson has produced a festival replete with a variety of jazz sounds — both new and returning. More than 25 different groups and soloists — musicians and vocalists— will be performing at one of the festival's three venues.

Some of the performers appearing for the first time in Idyllwild include Kenny Burrell, Janis Mann, the Mahesh Quartet, Tony Moore with Lori Jenaire, Clayton Cameron and the Bonne Musique Zydeco Band.

For those who wish to time favorites, Rocky Zharp, Chuck Alvarez, Barnaby Finch and Idyllwild Arts students and alumni will the Barn and the French Ouarter.

Goodwin's first Jazz Fest appearance was last year with the Little Phat Band. Its popularity brings him back. This year the saxophonist and pianist returns with a much larger backup. The Big Phat Band includes 18 jazz musicians on Saturday on the Holmes Amphitheatre Bromberg brings his basses to Idyllwild for the first time. His jazz music incorporates the diversity of bass — from acoustic bass to electric bass, piccolo bass to synthesizer bass.

Bromberg has released his own albums, received Grammy nominations and musicians from Gerry Mulligan to Lionel Hampton and Lee Rittenour.

Iust before Goodwin on be featured both days in Saturday, Kenny Burrell, noted jazz guitarist, will make his inaugural Idyllwild appearance. Burrell, well known for his bebop and blues, brings it all to the Holmes. Burrell knows his music, not just the sheets and sounds. descended from powerful prides and predatory packs, rulers of our own dominions.

I have walked with you now for thousands of years from your campfires to your farms to your cities. Once fiercely independent, I have grown compliantly

Once wary and aloof, I now rush to the sound of your voice.

When you leave, my only thought is your return Nothing is more important.

When you are happy with me, I rejoice and frolic Nothing is more important.

When you are frightened, sad or ill,

I remain at your side, ready to protect, ready to comfort, ready to heal.

If you die or discard me, my world, in all that is important, comes to an end.

I then wait with fear for what may come next. Will someone else love me as you have?

A tail of unintended consequences

By Ben Killingsworth WITH ASSISTANCE FROM Monk

In a high tech, highly contested election, Max was elected mayor of Idyllwild. The announcement was made Sunday at his inauguration at ARF.

Tens of thousands of dollars were raised to support ARF, money that everyone knew would be put to good use, but there was also a surprising development which did not come to light until well after the election. Alas, it turned into another example of how even the best of ideas can, and often do, have unintended consequences.

At first, as might have been expected, Max did not understand what all of the extra attention he began receiving was about, but ever so slowly he began to realize that he and his new friends were now very important members of the community.

At first he couldn't put his paw on it, but like all clever politicians, he learned that the word "mayor" was important, and he needed to perform some act just as secret meetings which were he had learned responding to "sit" and "come" resulted in a treat.

After all, each time he was introduced as "the mayor" at public events he was greeted by thunderous applause and given very special treats, better than his manager often offered.

As he continued to ponder his situation, he stumbled on an idea — one that he had heard discussed at the election commission. So after listening carefully to what they were saying for a few days he learned two other words, "City Council," and soon realized the similarity between those words and the word, "pack," which he had learned as a puppy.

And so it was that Max chose and organized a city council. It really wasn't that difficult because he simply asked all of the other dogs who ran for mayor to join long the mayor and his his administration and be that new word "City Council." After all, they were all politicians anyway, and they jumped at the idea.

or so Max organized daily a local police force.

carried out by barking during the early morning hours when their voices would carry long distances. Complaints, of course, arose from people who had no idea as to what was really going on, but Max was the patient sort, and knew it wouldn't be long before barking in the wee hours was completely legal, and those who complained would be dealt with appropriately.

Max and his council, which became known as the "Canine Council," knew that the freedom to bark was only the beginning. Many other conflicts with other species would now be addressed. They learned about ordinances and how the people in the loud red blinking cars would force other humans to comply.

That notion, however, raised the question of how council could expect this loyalty. So after discussing it in a special closed session for a few days, they realized that better compliance and During the next month respect for the law required

Although they were unable to promise any sort of lucrative retirement plan, at least at first, they sought to recruit those who had a natural tendency toward dealing firmly with trespassers, passing pedestrians, loud motor vehicles, and the like. They sought a police force made up of dogs that looked and sounded tough. So, they focused on recruiting German Shepherds, Rottweilers, Doberman Pinschers, and Chows.

Recruitment went smoothly and soon Max and his council members had organized a force of 22 of the toughest-looking dogs on the Hill.

Next, the canine council began to discuss during those early morning meetings, the ordinances they felt were needed. Here's a brief list of the newly enacted Idvllwild ordinances.

Heller

Heller pursued an undergraduate degree in English and graduate degrees in English education, including a doctorate. He said he realized that if he were to teach as part of his career path, he wanted to teach creative writing. He then acquired an master in fine arts in creative writing. "It was a way to avoid growing up," said Heller of his extended years of education and delay in writing creatively.

His published story, "The Red Dust of Lana'i," appeared in 1987 in a collection of short stories, "Pas-Short Stories of Contemporary Hawaii," compiled by Frank Stewart. Heller noted that the impetus for his first story was a desire to preserve a personal memory from an of people who worked in the pineapple fields on Lana'i, their pidgin English, and a way of life that Heller saw disappearing.

earlier time spent in Hawaii

"Memory and imagination are the two resources sages to the Dream Shore: of fiction," said Heller. "And it was the memory of those voices I was trying to retain and preserve that allowed me to start. Once I had that, the writing went well."

The red dust, dislodged by heavy trucks transporting pineapple on Lana'i's unpaved roads, was also part of a rapidly disappearing past, as Lana'i's pineapple agriculture attenuated, roads became paved, and resorts began to open. "I wrote this because the voices of these characters were disappearing in my memory," said Heller. 'I thought 'how would it be like for this way of life to be disappearing' and that is why and how I began.

"No matter what else we think we're doing [as writers], we're always writing about history. I'm also the kind of writer who likes to move through topography and landscapes." Heller said remembered sounds and landscapes impel his writ-

"I don't believe in plot," he said. "I believe in voice and point of view." Of his weaving of memory and approach to writing, Heller said that images, details of place, phrasings that repeat over and over, patterns that readers see and recognize, are what characterize and color his writing.

As to structure, Heller said he starts with the first line and then considers what the character needs to know and what the next words would be. In a story from his collection "The Man Who Drank a Thousand Beers," the first line is, "Joseph Kamahele, the strongest man in Waikiki, was sure he was being watched."

"So, who is watching him and what are they trying to see or detect, would be where I would go next," Heller said.

Heller, who said he advises his students to pursue careers in writing only if they have to, said he is compelled to write. "Writing is not self-expression [a mistaken belief he points out to his students]," he said. "It is engagement with 'otherness,' putting oneself in another's shoes until those feelings become comfortable and natural." And for Heller it is the interimagination that produces, as his stories unfold, that natural comfort.

Heller's writing has earned a National Endowment for the Arts Fellowship, two O. Henry short story awards, a Kansas Literary Artists Fellowship in fiction and a Kansas Governor's Arts Award. Critics have called his "Thousand Beers" collection of stories, all set in Hawaii, "a Hawaiian 'Winesburg, Ohio." He will discuss with Santiago his award-winning novel "The Automotive History of Lucky Kellerman" (Chelsea Green, 1987). "Kellerman" received a Friends of American Writers First Prize Award for the best book of fiction or nonfiction related to the Midwest. It is inspired by his relationship with his father, a man who worked with his hands. Heller said he knew can be reached at from an early age he would marshall@towncrier.com.

be a different kind of man, one who worked using his mind. But it was the question of how he could be so different from his father, and that they nevertheless loved each other, that led him to write "Kellerman." "What if we had been less forgiving. less patient, slightly different sorts of people," he wondered. "What if one of us had made a serious mistake, something the other could not have forgiven." Heller said the answers to these questions led to a story that grew into his novel. He is currently working on his next novel, "Return of the Ghost Killer," another work that examines father. son relationships. "That's an important theme in my work," said Heller.

He and Santiago talk at 2 p.m. on Sunday, July 15, at INK Book Gathering on North Circle. The event is

I am sincerely sorry to learn that damage has been done to the camp's property. It seems unlikely, however, that signs or fences will deter miscreants.

By the way, our dogs have done no damage to the camp property. Those of us who walk with them regularly are meticulous about picking up after them and keeping the path clean and free of all debris. When we see children or campers, we turn around and walk the other way.

Absolutely, all children must be protected from all harm. I trust that Idyllwild Pines staff is taught extreme vigilance in looking out for them; that is their responsibility, after all.

But isn't it less likely that harm will come to children (or property) when caring neighbors like my friends and I are nearby, keeping an eye out for potential troublemak-

Is the new director open to the notion of creating a Neighborhood Watch with and among the camp's neighbors to that end in exchange for access to the creekside path?

VIRGINIA CROWDER Idyllwild

Re: Closure of Idyllwild Pines Camp — 4

EDITOR:

Martha Snyder wrote in "Another Point of View" [see the Town Crier's June 28 issue] that Idyllwild Pines Camp now prohibits pedestrians from walking through camp because children are being kidnapped, molested, abused and murdered. Really? How will preventing locals from walking through camp protect campers?

The article reads like a bad sermon: inflammatory, over reactive and filled with exaggerated half-truths.

She cites a list of pseudothreats the camp has experienced, like, "a host of bicyclists rode through the middle of campus at warp speed." Really? Is 5-6 a "host"? Can bikes travel at "warp" speed?

Second, "We've had our administrative offices broken into." Really? A window was broken in the building that triggered an alarm. There was no entry and nothing stolen.

Third, "Almost naked, disoriented men sitting on picnic tables." Really? There was one incident of a shirtless, homeless man who washed his clothes in Strawberry Creek and had no contact with campers.

Fourth, "Signs and lighting ... are regularly destroyed." Really? Is twice a year regularly? Most of what gets destroyed is by campers, not locals.

Fifth, "Someone broke into unoccupied dormitories and stayed the night." Really? Nothing was broken into. Someone stayed in the dorms because they found lost keys and let themselves in.

All Ms. Snyder has done to protect campers from these so-called threats is post six ugly orange signs warning: "Private Property: No Trespassing." She has not added any security lighting with motion sensors. She has never hired a security guard to patrol while campers are present. If camper security is her highest concern, why have these inexpensive measures never been taken?

Most of us in the big bad world off camp property don't carry AK-47s. Neither we nor our dogs pose a threat to campers. We just enjoy a good walk in the woods. In fact, wasn't the Strawberry Creek trail that runs through camp supposed to assure community access?

Pines Camp board in October — none of whom live in Idyllwild — will soon have the entire 50 acre property surrounded by a six-foot high wooden fence to accomplish her objective of preventing local access to the camp.

If Ms. Snyder actually became involved in the community, rather than remaining removed from it, she would find that the good people of Idyllwild would assist in addressing her concerns.

We are not the problem, but we can become part of the solution.

TED EWING FORMER IPC PROGRAM DIRECTOR

Librarian

EDITOR:

I want Teresa back.

Idyllwild is a community as well as a location. We smile at strangers on the street, we chat with people whom we know only as someone with a P.O. box near ours, we watch our neighbor's house when they go off the Hill. And we speak up when a valuable member of our community disappears.

I don't know for sure why Teresa Brouwer is no longer our librarian. Rumor has it that Teresa didn't meet some requirement. I'm not arguing the value of that requirement. It may be important for the library system. And it may be important for Teresa's replacement when Teresa voluntarily leaves. But the requirement ignores Teresa's years of service to our community.

For 22 years, Teresa has pointed out books she knows we might like. She has let us bring our 10 cent fine in next time. She has shown us the location of books after we have searched without success. She has asked about our kids now living off-Hill. She has laughed with us about our life glitches. She is our friend and neighbor.

Yes, there is a reason for job requirements. Yes, Idyllwild should obey the rules that apply to the rest of the county. But there are times people are more important than requirements.

Could the library system "grandfather" in Teresa in recognition of the fact that she has served us well so many years? It would show that they too are interested in being a member of our special community.

We owe Teresa, and all our neighbors, to try to keep her in our library.

Amanda Taylor Idyllwild

Re: Librarian

EDITOR:

I cannot comment on any staff changes at Idyllwild Library as it falls under personnel issues.

I will say, however, that the kind of librarian described by the letter writer is the kind of librarian we expect at all of the libraries in the county.

A person who relates well to the "personality" of the community; a person who is excellent at implementing readers' advisory services, and who simply has that unquantifiable touch as a community librarian.

For such a person who has this strong connection to the community and who has so many years of dedicated service, it is our recommendation that some type of celebration of her years of service takes place. We would love to be a part of that celebration.

Regardless, staffing of libraries — who comes and who leaves — is a personnel matter protected by privacy

Playground use

EDITOR

It has come to my attention that Town Hall kids are being told that they are not allowed to play in the new playground.

This is a travesty. I spent three days working 12 to 14 hours on it for our community, and then to hear that some of our kids are not worthy to play on it.

Who are these people to tell children this. They need to take a good look at their motives for building it in the first place.

Diane Olsen

Editor:

I feel compelled to write for the opportunity to read about Diane Olsen in your June 28 issue. Rather than call it an obituary, I would describe Kristina Olsen's piece as an appreciation of her mother's life, and it simply radiated humor, insight and compassion.

Fire

contractor from a county approved list of contractors to do the work.

It is obviously a wonderful deal for the owner, as well as a great benefit to the community. A wood shake roof is probably the greatest fire hazard in any residential community, since they present a large, flammable surface to the ember storm that accompanies wildfires. Research has shown them to be a significant vulnerability, which is why FEMA decided to allocate prevention dollars towards their replacement.

If you have such a roof, please call the office at (951) 659-6208 to participate. Odds are you and one of our project managers have already discussed this program, but in any case, give us a call to start the process.

Although I was not privileged to know Diane, she was obviously a person who put her talents and energy to good use in this world, and inspired others to do the same.

How fortunate are Idyllwild and her circle of friends, to have had the benefit of her mind and spirit.

She and her family designed the end of her life in a way that allowed her to "fly" away from discomfort and dependence according to their principles, which shows rare understanding, love and respect.

Kristina's story celebrates the specific and essential qualities of her mother (and, amusingly, her mother's mother — the distaff line is superior stock indeed) with a lovely prose style. The passage about Beethoven was impossibly moving, and it gives me even more reason to admire those who act with integrity.

I send condolences to Diane's family, and will honor her special passions in the future, with regard to the Nature Center and ARF of Idyllwild.

Leash ordinance

Editor:

As a first-time visitor to Idyllwild, one of the things I have found especially delightful is the pet-friendly atmosphere. In fact, the discovery that there were pet-friendly trails in Idyllwild was the primary reason I came here for a week's vacation.

I too enjoyed the Ernie Maxwell trail with my dog off leash. We met many hikers on the trail with dogs. Some [dogs] were on the leash, some were off. Each time, even if there was a moment of unpredictability, the dogs and we hikers were able to work things out in a friendly way. We too met other dogs and hikers along steep, narrow trails, but our unleashed dogs were nimble enough to maneuver around each other without a problem.

I have been a dog-owner most of my life. My experiences with people who insist that all dogs be on a leash at all times are usually the ones who own dogs that would run away or become insecure if they were not on the leash. Those of us who enjoy walking our dogs off leash, usually have dogs that are reliable and well-behaved around other people and dogs.

I understand that some dog owners who have small, vulnerable dogs would be fearful around unleashed dogs.

However, it disappoints me tremendously to have found this letter in the Town Crier [the June 21 issue] when I thought I had finally found a place where people really were willing to work together to enjoy their dogs and their trails without the need to cite ordinances.

This whole incident seems so unnecessary to me. It seems to me that the hiker who needs to have his dog on a leash can always hike in places where Ordinance 630 is strictly enforced and leave the Ernie Maxwell trail to those of us who don't need ordinances to ensure our enjoyment of what nature has provided.

How to pay for healthcare

Editor:

The reason a majority of Americans do not support Obama Care is clear — it is basically unfair.

Once again, the middle class is being asked to bear the tax burden to provide free coverage to some Americans, while they will have to struggle with yet another bill they can't afford to pay. In essence, we're being penalized for our success and hard work.

the salacious colors "Naughty Pine," "Shack Up On the Hill," or "Bunny Stop" (the latter reputedly once owned by Hugh Hefner).

I cease trying to categorize in the face of labels like "Mc-Cabin," "Alabama West," "Monticello," or the simply reassuring "Here 'Tis."

My all-time favorite expression of Idyllwild living, however, goes to this weird marriage of Latin and Spanish: "Carpe Mañana." Let us indeed be quick to seize the possibilities of ... well, maybe tomorrow.

Finally, in naming our cabin out in Pinewood, Adele and I couldn't resist indulging in some wordplay. To honor that community's creator, my grandfather Frank Moote, an attorney with a keen sense of humor, we invented a pretentious phrase worthy of a developer: "Moote Pointe."

These examples hardly scratch the surface of what a complete census of house names might reveal. But they amply reflect the individuality of Idyllwild's homes and the creativity of its population throughout our village's history.

Just what does "affordable" mean anyway, and who decides that?

What is needed in the debate are some new ideas. Ideas that do not pit one group of citizens against another. Ideas that do not provide a huge payday for our unethical forprofit insurance industry.

Since we no longer have a viable political left in the U.S., it remains for independent thinkers to suggest an equitable way forward.

Here is my proposal, which I hope will add to the discussion a dimension of common sense currently missing from the polemic.

Nationalize energy resources where they occur on public lands. Use this money to fund a single payer social health care system.

The oil and natural gas resources that exist within the territorial waters and public lands of the United States are the common property of the citizens of the United States, and should be reclaimed from international energy companies.

President Obama had an excellent opportunity to do this when BP failed to comply with safety standards resulting in the oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico. Unfortunately, he did not do so.

The current arrangement, in which these international energy companies lease public lands for relatively small "royalty" fees is exploitative and unfair to the American public, whose resources they are.

In essence what is happening is that these multi-nationals are taking public resources and turning them into private wealth. If these resources are reclaimed in the name of the American citizen, Congress will have the money to fund a single payer social health care system.

Why should we, as a nation be giving away our energy resources for pitiful "royalties", and then be forced to buy them back at the pump at outrageous prices from a cabal of international investors dominated by, in the case of BP, oil sheiks from Qatar? In brief, we as a nation are being robbed to benefit the bottom line of the international investment class.

This idea is not a new way of thinking in the western world. Indeed, British Petroleum was originally a state monopoly in England, until the infamous days of the Reagan and Thatcher deregulation cult, as was Royal Dutch Shell,

We do believe in striking the right balance between authentic social programs and free enterprise, so we are not suggesting that all energy resources be nationalized in the U.S., only those that are available on public lands and within territorial waters. The result would be a redirection of the proceeds of our commonly held property away from the investment class back into the treasury of the U.S. where they could then be used to fund a fair health care system for all Americans.

You won't hear this simple idea discussed in the corporate media, nor by any of our, "left wing" politicians. As previously stated, we no longer have a left in American politics, merely the right, and right-lite.

Thank you for having the intellectual creativity and the courage of conviction to consider these proposals.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Aspects favor socializing with family and friends, but an irksome workplace situation could intrude. No use grumbling, Lamb. Just do it, and then get back to the fun times.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) There's still time for you Ferdinands and Fernandas to relax and sniff the roses. But a major work project looms and soon will demand much of your attention through the 23rd.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your enthusiasm persuades even the toughest doubters to listen to what you're proposing. But don't push too hard, or you'll push them away. Moderate for best results.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your energy levels are rising, and you feel you can handle anything the job requires. That's great. But don't isolate yourself. Keep your door open to your workplace colleagues.

LEO (July 23 August 22) A workplace change could lead to that promotion you've been hoping for. But you'll have to face some tough competition before the Lion can claim his or her share of the goodies.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your rigidity regarding a difficult workplace situation could be the reason your colleagues aren't rushing to your assistance. Try being more flexible in your demands.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The capricious Sea Goat is torn between duty and diversion. Best advice: Do both. Tend to your workaday chores, then go out and enjoy your well-earned fun time.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Cutting back on some of your activities for a few days helps restore your energy levels. You should be feeling ready to tackle your many projects early next week.

residing in or visiting the community shall be fed anything other than grade-A beef, either raw or cooked to their specifications. Dogs will be fed both in the morning and evening and shall have fresh water accessible 24 hours a day.

Considerate Language Law: No dog owner or other person either residing in or visiting the community shall use the word, "No," when addressing any dog, regardless of the circumstances.

Open Door Law: No business of any kind shall restrict dogs from entering the establishment. Additionally, all restaurants shall provide a Dog Menu, which menu shall not include any processed food either from a can or a sack. Dogs will not be expected to pay in return for keeping the restaurant free of cats and safe from lawbreakers and unruly people.

No Neutering Law: No dog shall be subjected to the barbaric practice of rendering it "neuter," and all dogs will be free to procreate as the occasion arises.

Freedom to Ride in Comfort Law: Hereafter, all dogs will be allowed to put their heads out of motor vehicle windows regardless of weather conditions. Additionally, dogs shall be permitted to sit or lie anywhere in the vehicle at their sole discretion.

And so it began — not a dogs' world yet, but at least there's now a dogs' town.

Let's hope they remember how much we love them, and forgive us for our ignorant actions of the past, most of which are now violations of one or more of the newly enacted ordinances.

be in full bloom with its lacy green foliage and downward facing red and yellow flowers hanging like bells over the trickling waters of the creek. I have a special place in my heart for wild roses and columbine as they were the first two species of flowers that I encountered when I first came to Idyllwild in the 1970s.

The white four-petaled thimbleberry blossoms (Rubus parviflorus) were also starting to reach their peak. You can tell the thimbleberries from the gooseberries by the thorns on the thimbleberry stems. The genus name Rubus is Latin for bramble or briar so it is aptly named.

We finally climbed out of our shady, riparian walkway and started to head home. The sunshine was so intense that it felt like it could melt us humans. Turning onto Riverside County Playground Road, just before Pine Crest we crossed a dry creek on the right. I noticed a tall plant with a cluster of star-shaped pink flowers that I did not recognize, so of course I stopped to take a picture.

Some of the pink flowers were growing next to a driveway so I stopped there to shoot a closeup of my new discovery. It was only then that I looked down on the dry creek bed and noticed a stunning patch of color that was all but hidden from the roadside view.

Below us was a dense patch about 200 square feet of feverfew with its white flowers with yellow centers. Interspersed in the patch were purple and pink wild peas, yellow evening primroses, huge green flowered plants that looked like they were from another planet and bordered by yellow turbans and many of the pink colored flower stalks growing up the hillside. I spent about an hour shooting photos and returned on Sunday and took more shots.

Max is the first mayor of Idyllwild and wishes a happy 4th of July to all. Paws up to you Max, and to your cabinet members.

See a Penny, pick it up. Which is exactly what someone did with this little girl. Penny Lane is a 3-year-old terrier mix who was found wandering in the desert for who knows how long. She has passed the vet test, feline and canine test. After grooming her 3-inch dreadlocks, bathing and spaying, she has found new energy to be in your arms. She loves to ride in the car or be in your lap. Just one visit and you will fall in love with Penny.

This is Spencer, looking out the door for his favorite human. Abandoned for what reason? Not a barker, good with other dogs and cats, and he knows basic commands. Great on the leash, potty trained and handsome. Spencer is a poodle mix that will show you unconditional love. Come by ARF and walk Spencer and fall in

Are you ready to play? I am! My name is Molly II, too that is. Because I always want to go too, wherever it is you are going. I want to play too, with whoever wants to throw the ball to me. And the walk? I want to go too! Let's even energetic young home to match. She is learning basic commands, and doing well at that. Good with other 4leggeds, large or small, and OK with the feline crowd as well. She can use a doggy door, and is crate trained. All she needs is you and a leash.

ARF has many cats and dogs available for adoption or fostering. Go to www.arfidyllwild.weebly. com and click on Petfinder. All pets are spayed, neutered, and current on shots. ARF is open 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturdays and 10 a.m.-3 p.m. Sundays. Call (951) 659-1122 or email info@idyllwildarf.org for appointment on any other day.

Creature corner is sponsored this week by Eileen Roberts in memory of her three four-legged friends, Rosie, Robin and Quatay, who passed away while living in Idyllwild. To sponsor the column, call Shane Fender at the Town Crier, 659-2145.

Evie Kretsinger passed on a comment on TV: "Before the dawn of civilization, primitive man ate raw meat in dark caves and gazed at the pictographs he had painted on the walls. As man became civilized, he dined by candlelight and food became a social ritual. Now, man is right back where he started; eating in the dark and watching pictures on TV."
