Highway 243 closed since last week

Expected to reopen Friday

By JP CRUMRINE NEWS EDITOR

On Friday, Dec. 7, Highway 243 was closed in both directions through Friday, Dec. 14, Caltrans announced last week.

The closure location is just north of Lake Fulmor and work will continue 24/7 until it's completed.

Caltrans stressed in its press release, "Traffic will not be allowed to cross. Please be advised that traffic will be turned around, so plan to use an alternate route."

Caltrans coordinated the closure with the Riverside County Sheriff's and Emergency Management departments, as well as the Idyllwild Fire Department.

The concern is that if a rainstorm floods the Cranston Fire area, traffic may have no way on or off the Hill. But while a rainstorm drenched the Hill before the work began, the weather forecast for this week expects sunny and slightly warmer weather.

Search for missing man ends tragically

By JP Crumrine News Editor

The body of David "Dave" Elliott Bradish, 80, of Idyllwild, was found Saturday afternoon, Dec. 8. He had been missing since Monday, Nov. 26.

Another search and rescue effort was initiated after his dog, Ginger, was found Wednesday near the Fern Valley Corners area of Idyllwild. Rain delayed the new search until Saturday.

Bradish suffered from Alzheimer's. His body was found well above Chipmunk Drive, according to Riverside County Sheriff's Sgt. Kenneth Reichle

"It was beyond private property in the national forest area," he said. "We had no leads to suggest he was in the area."

While the Sheriff's Coroner's office has not posted an official cause of death, it is speculated that he died in the early days of his disappearance.

He and his wife Linda had moved to Idyllwild in late October to join his son, David, and daughter-in-law Jenni, who moved here in late summer.

On Sunday, Jenni posted a FaceBook message, which included the following thank you to the community, "... We don't know what to say except thank you for your searching with us and hoping with us and for all your prayers and thoughts and kindness. Please be at peace knowing that we all did everything we could have done to bring Dave home safe and that we his family, will be eternally grateful to all of you for all you've done to help him."

The search for Bradish began immediately after his and Ginger's disappearances, one of the largest search-and-rescue missions on the Hill that included multi-county agencies and local community members. And family and community continued to look for him since.

Hill residents are ardent voters

By JP Crumrine News Editor

Regardless of how Hill residents voted, which candidates they favored, the Hill is fertile area for candidates to reap votes. Again, from north on Highway 243 to Paradise Corners, the turnout substantially exceeded state and county interest in the November election.

Turnout The Ca

The California Secretary of State reported that 12.7 million Californians cast ballots in last month's election. The statewide turnout was 64.5 percent of registered voters.

In Riverside County, the turnout was almost the same — 62.5 percent.

The 2018 turnout was slightly less than the 75 percent of registered voters in the 2016 presidential election, but exceeded the 2014 gubernatorial election by nearly 50 percent. In November 2014, statewide, only 42 percent of registered voters cast a ballot. The last gubernatorial election to reach 60 percent turnout was 1994, and 1982 with a 69 percent turnout was the last time it was greater than last month's voter response.

Yet, as good as these results seem to be, turnout on the Hill was 80 percent or more. Only Garner Valley failed to reach that threshold, but its 267 ballots were 79 percent of registered voters.

In Mountain Center, turnout was 87 percent, followed by 82 percent in Idyllwild and 81 percent of Pine Cove registered voters.

Sheriff

While voter interest was high throughout the Hill, the support for various candidates varied from precinct to precinct except for the race for Riverside County sheriff.

Hill voters favored challenger Chad Bianco just about as much as the whole county. The final tally saw Bianco garnering 58 percent of votes cast for sheriff and he received more than 52 percent of votes in each of the four Hill areas.

Bianco got nearly 60 percent of the Garner Valley votes. While he also got a majority (52 percent) in Mountain Center, the actual vote was close at 25 to 23 votes for incumbent Stan Sniff.

Legislative races

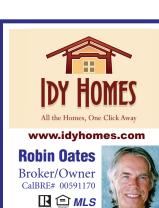

In the race for the 28th state Senate seat and the 36th Congressional District seat, the partisan difference of the Hill neighborhoods was quite apparent.

Incumbent Republican Jeff Stone kept his seat despite the effort of Democratic challenger Joy Silver.

Stone, in his second Senate race and as a former 3rd District supervisor, received 51.6 percent of votes cast in this race. Silver, who moved to Palm Springs several years ago and has not previously run for public office, came close to an upset with 48.4 percent of votes.

Hill voters were not unified in the support of the two candidates. Idyllwild and Pine Cove favored Silver. Fifty-six percent of Idyllwild voters cast ballots for Silver, who came to several Idyllwild Indivisibles meetings.

Pine Cove voters were much less sure of See Voters, page A8

Idyllwild Water studies possibility of breach at Foster Lake Dam

Some structures downstream could be flooded

By JP Crumrine News Editor

The Idyllwild Water District commissioned a study of the possible effects if the Foster Lake Dam were breached. The study was completed in July and submitted to the California Office of Emergency Services, which accepted it Nov. 1.

Following the failures at the Oroville Dam in February 2017, the state Legislature enacted requirements for all dams within the state to be reassessed. The current IWD "Inundation Study" complies with this legislation.

"I'm very comfortable with the reliability of the dam," said General Manager Jack Hoagland. "It's in good shape and we actively maintain it."

IWD stores water in Foster Lake. Lily Creek flows directly into the lake and water also is diverted from Strawberry Creek into the lake. Foster Lake was originally permitted in 1944 for a 40-acre-feet capacity. The report says its current capacity is 180 acre-feet.

"Foster Lake is contained behind the dam facilities that include an earthen dam to the south and west, and a concrete spillway to the south, says the authors of the technical study. "If a breach were to occur at the Foster Dam, the steep terrain found on the downstream side of the dam would cause the flood wave to have a high initial velocity due to the rapid change in elevation from the point of the areas of concern."

The biggest risk of an earthen dam is overtopping, according to the study. Engineering Resources of Southern California, which prepared the study, said "the limits of flood inundation has the potential to inundate a few structures and roadways along the flood path," depending upon the volume of water gest concern is communication of an emergency. The next step is preparing an emergency action plan, which Cal OES would like to have by Jan. 1, 2019, but which hasn't been started.

Preparation of the plan is identifying the property owners below the dam at risk of potential flooding and how to contact them in an emergency. However, Hoagland noted that over time, houses can be sold and new owners have to be contacted. Keeping the names and contact numbers current will be the long-term issues.

Hoagland emphasized that the dam and nearby shore are maintained thoroughly throughout the year. Removal of vegetation, rodent control, particularly gophers, and equipment replacement are conducted regularly.

The California's Divi-Hoagland said his big-sion of Safety of Dams, an agency in the Department of Water Resources, conducts annual inspections and has passed the Foster Lake Dam. "They make suggestions and we implement them," Hoagland said.

The last "Inundation Study" was conducted in 1974 and this study cost IWD $68,000. In November 2017, when the board approved the contract for this study, IWD Vice President Peter Szabadi recommended that the 1974 study be submitted since ... where the water will go should the dam fail has not changed."

While it was approved, President Dr. Charles "Chip" Schelly abstained from voting for or against conducting the analysis.

Preparation of a new emergency action plan is the next step for the board, which has not discussed the report since its preparation in July or its acceptance in November.

The Town Crier's Idyllwild daily high and low temperatures and rain and snow totals in the past were taken directly from the National Weather Service website, which gets its Idyllwild weather information from automatic weather sensing equipment at Idyllwild Fire Station, an official

NWS COOP reporter. The amount of rain plus the amount of water present in snow would be the "moisture" total for that day. But we cannot accurately report "moisture" since we currently receive no report of how much water is contained in any particular snowfall. [We are seeking reliable Idyllwild and Pine Cove full-time residents to provide this information. Residents who follow CoCoRaHS procedures would be strongly preferred. CoCoRaHS is an organization of private, amateur weather observers that provides carefully collected data for use by the NWS. Pile burning in local forest continues this week

The U.S. Forest Service intends to conduct several prescribed burning projects this week throughout the San Bernardino National Forest.

Tuesday, the burn was to be at the Kenworthy Fire Station in Garner Valley. Wednesday, the Forest Service plans to burn more piles near the Vista Grande Fire Station north of Pine Cove.

Next week, there may be burns along the Pine Cove and Westridge fuel breaks. These will be to the west of Pine Cove and southwest of Idyllwild.

The specific day and time are determined the day before based on weather conditions, staffing availability and air quality. If conditions worsen between then and the next morning, plans may be canceled.

Many burns are planned for this winter and the weather this week is an opportunity to conduct them.

The piles burned are the result of forest thinning of shrubs and low-hanging tree branches.

Smoke may be seen in the area. Drivers in the area should slow down for personnel on the sides of local roads.

For more information and background on this and other prescribed fires, can be found online at https://go.usa.gov/xPt6T. The public can also check in on planned prescribed burns by calling 909-382-2711 or following the forest on Twitter at @SanBernardinoNF.

Winter rains continued last week

Drought conditions diminishing

By JP Crumrine News Editor

After drought conditions for nearly a year, the Hill has experienced a very wet holiday season.

For the second consecutive week since Thanksgiving, a significant rainstorm passed over Southern California. While the drought conditions have been mitigated, the Hill is still within a drought situation.

More snow fell during this storm, too. About half an inch came down in Pine Cove and lasted through Friday, although the actual storm had passed Thursday night. However, nearly 15 inches was recorded in Long Valley and the San Jacinto

Total rainfall at the U.S. Forest Service's Keenwild Ranger Station was reported as 1.2 inches for a total since Oct. 1 of 4.5 inches.

The Idyllwild Fire Station also recorded 1.2 inches; the rain total since Oct. 1 has been 4.3 inches.

"So far we are doing very well for the first few months of our water year beginning Oct. 1. Far inland areas are from 150% to 350% of normal, while coastal areas hover close to 100%. We are not looking to add much to these totals this week with mostly dry weather forecast," wrote the San Diego staff of the National Weather Service Monday

The long-term average rain from Oct. 1 through Nov. 30 has been 3.5 inches. But the rain from Oct 1, 2017, through Sept. 30, 2018, was substantially below the annual average of 25.7 inches.

Another system is expected to pass over Southern California Tuesday but its precipitation potential is considered negligible.

"Have kept a slight chance of light showers Monday night to Tuesday. Rainfall amounts will be tracked to a few hundredths of an inch with most locales dry," according to the NWS' forecast Sunday morning.

However, next weekend, Hill residents may see another rainfall, according to the NWS.

The interesting aspect of this week's storm was the heavier rainfall was east and south of the Hill. For example, Anza received 2.1 inches of rain. John Wayne Airport had 3.5 inches and Oceanside in San Diego County received 2.8 inches of rain.

Obituary Larry Eugene Medinger 1940-2018

der, being made to leave when I wasn't finished yet. So, the particulars:

I was born a Nebraska farm boy back when small family Midwest farms were feeding America. Born in October 1940, a third-generation Medinger from Newhousen, Luxinberg, my father Clyde was a hardscrabble farmer, always putting together something out of plundered tractors and trucks out in the barn.

My mother was a Morgan going way back to when the third son of a lord had to make his own way, therefore, that ancestor took a boat to America from Lantarnum, Wales. My mother had several famous cousins, amongst them Daniel Boone and General Dan Morgan. However, by the time the Morgans had put in more time in this country than most, they were down to bare essentials. Loretha grew up in one of those soddies out on the Nebraska praries, glad to marry a farmer with means.

I was first of six siblings. We all got shortened versions of more ponderous names: I was named Larry, not Lawrence, then Dick, not Richard, followed by Kathy, Ron, Karen and Randy

My father did mixed farming west of the cornbelt outside Columbus, Nebraska, wheatbelt territory. I was put on a tractor at age 9, told how to plow a straight row by sighting the fenceline. Being half-grown and terrified, lifted up to the wheel of the John Deere B, the machine got away from me. I sighted the wrong fence, and took off across the cornrows, my father lickety-split behind. There's a story about that.

I was given a shotgun around then and told to bring home rabbits for the pot, 'til one day one looked me straight in my eyes, quivering. I never shot that gun again. There's a story about that.

I was sent to school in a one-room schoolhouse at age 4. They didn't find out I needed glasses 'til two years later. There's several stories about that.

And one about wading the Platt, shoes and clothes on my head so I wouldn't arrive wet, to visit my girlfriend in the middle of the night. Another about my first car, first time I saw a home filled with books, a lot of firsts that nudged me into becoming the reader I've been all my life, before there was Google.

Idyllwild Interfaith Service of Solace was Friday at St. Hugh's Episcopal Church. Readings from different faith traditions were shared. Music, song and expressions of hope and peace united those who attended. Many wrote down their losses and tossed them into the fire, letting them go both physically and otherwise. PHOTO BY JENNY KIRCHNER

I entered Nebraska State as a freshman, one year younger than everyone else. Dropped out and took a test with Bob Sunderman to work on the Union Pacific as a lineman. Only two who passed the test were sent out to the West Coast, Columbia Gorge above Portland, climbing poles in slick weather, camping in freezing billets, stringing some of the first lines out to the coast with hardened, tested men. That's where I learned my lesson about conceit—I was an arrogant prick, no humility. Good lesson learned on the job.

I helped build the old road up to Mt. St. Helens, work now buried under ash. I worked NB and SD on a 16-mil dump truck on a road project on the Cheyenne Reservation, where waves of rolling grass ripple in the wind. I worked on the Bureau of Public Roads survey team. I know how to gauge the slope of a road just so; so speed devils can take curves without going over. There were others, jobs in which a boy becomes a man, from here to Nebraska.

I enrolled at Portland State, where Dr. Fred Stocking taught me life's terms through literature. I once crawled across Aldous Huxley's lap to get out of a cab, only managing to blurt, "Thank you for all your books" as I exited.

My first wife, Bea, and I drove a Honda 50 pregnant with my firstborn, Julian, across country in the fall to drive tractor in Nebraska until her horrified parents flew her back to Spokane. Our beautiful boy was born in San Francisco.

My wife Donnea and I met in Portland where I was raising my son. Together we migrated down to Southern Oregon, eventually settling in Ashland. I worked at a ceramic kiln outfit, and as an entimological assistant for Oregon State University before starting Medinger Construction with Donnea. We had our son Crispin in the fall. We were tireless on behalf of improving Ashland. We worked to get Donnea on the Ashland schoolboard and together, we made a difference. Our first subdivision was Jessica Lane, named after our daughter, followed by Mill Pond right at the time when banks were loaning and business was booming.

You remember that long Vietnam war, those '60s that defined our generation, our music, once on vinyl, now on CDs, the events that shaped us now in history books? Our daughter Jessica was on the last transport out of Saigon. She arrived so dehydrated and malnourished at 6 months you could literally hold her, head to foot, in two cupped hands. She became a ferociously tough volleyball player.

I married my wife Susan in '94. Those were some treasured years, raising little Sophia in the Green Springs. I became president of Builders Association of Southern Oregon, was on the Planning Commission up in Salem for nine years on the State Housing Board. My last subdivision, Mountain Meadows, a retirement community outside of a significantly improved Ashland, took me down in the '08 crash.

Although we should have slunk off to lick our wounds, a teaching position arose over in Morocco just as I was filing for bankruptcy. We took the position. We had an extraordinary adventure for almost five years there, teaching side by side, Susan as an English teacher, me teaching history to young people who became our beloved rascals, now young adults, still keeping in touch.

In between flying across the Atlantic, now retired here in Idyllwild with my wife, we volunteered for the Historical Society home tours, Art Alliance Art Walks and as Idyllwild Arts Associates during jazz fests. I worked with Mark and Mara on a biomass electric project, now renamed after the fire into forest survival, until I couldn't.

Susan and I almost made it to our 25th anniversary. She was beloved. I want her to know that.

I've written some magazine articles, several short stories and memoir pieces, and as a member of Ken Luber's writers' group, wrote a manuscript about the first people, "This is Us," soon to be published.

I noticed in last week's Town Crier that the U.S. Forest Service, with the help of volunteers, was planting trees in the burn scar area. It takes many years (decades) for the forest to recoup on its own, so a little bit of help from us in expediting the process goes a

Like many local residents, we moved up here because of the beauty of the surrounding

I think many of us can help plant saplings. On our piece of property in Fern Valley grow many cedars and pines. During most of the year, these trees drop seeds all over the place. I see many dozens of small trees spring up around the facility; so many that I dig some up and plant elsewhere. I have successfully moved more than 30, (6 to 20 inches) in the last three years. I also containerize many to give to my friends down the Hill for their gardens

So my suggestion is for us to dig up some of these 12-to 18-inch saplings, put them in containers and replant them in areas designated by the Forest Service. Maybe put a marker in the ground next to each tree with our name and date planted. We could then visit our trees and hand water them for a while until they're established.

If a few hundred local residents planted just a couple of trees and took care of them for a month of two, we might have our beautiful forest back again in our lifetime.

My quiet skies in Idyllwild

Who are these people who are continuing to gripe about jet airplanes? Don't they ever fly in one?

When I see one go over, I see 200 people sitting in seats going somewhere. I think that's kind of neat.

I haven't heard a jet go over in 10 years. Be thankful you can hear. (Once in a while, I do hear an auto or motorcycle.)

the mornings and can get some work done, but by mid-afternoon I'm through. Just yesterday, it occurred to me that this is exactly how it's meant to be.

My ancestry is mostly Germanic. I'm not sure how they do things in tropical regions, but in northern climes, we hunker down for winter. Spring is planting time, summer is filled with tending crops and cattle, autumn is the busy harvest.

But then comes December with brief days and snowy nights. It's a quiet time.

You sit by the fire with a cup of mead, tell a few stories. Maybe you darn socks or sharpen the plow — some lowkey occupation. You go to bed early, and since the sun rises late, the rooster allows you to sleep in.

This was nature's intent for winter. Conserve your energy, nature said. Food is scarcer now; you'll need your calories for keeping warm. Labor in the cold is difficult and not very productive anyway. Rest awhile. There'll be plenty to do when spring comes 'round again.

We clever moderns tend to ignore this good advice. Our biological makeup has not significantly changed, but our attitude has. If we feel lassitude in the chilly months, we think there's something wrong with us, and we push ourselves into activity. Turn up the thermostat, flood the rooms with electric light and now it's summer again: Let's get to work.

We have even chosen, with a kind of perverse willfulness, to designate December the busiest month of the year. We race around shopping malls, bake mounds of cookies, journey long distances to visit relatives, or scrub and decorate our homes for receiving them. Retailers work longer hours, entertainers play more gigs.

Our ancestors would wonder what mischievous demons are driving us. "This is flu season!" commercials announce cheerily, and small wonder: Here in the bleak mid-winter, we're running about as if it were the merry month of May. Our bodies were never designed for this.

Friends and family should be forewarned that I'm giving out a lot of gift cards this year. I'll keep the fire stoked, and if you care to drop by, perhaps I'll toss a roast in the oven, or a frozen pie — something easy. Be sure to bring mead.

State Fire Safe Council awards local council $200,000

By JP Crumrine News Editor

Last week, the California Fire Safe Council awarded a $200,000 matching grant to the Mountain Communities Fire Safe Council. The local FSC was one of 45 awardees this year.

The statewide agency awarded a total of $4.8 million, which will be matched by another $5.5 million.

The U.S. Forest Service made the funding available to the California FSC, who reviewed fuel reduction projects from throughout the state.

In its press release, the state FSC described the projects as "support to implement fuel reduction projects such as community chipper programs, fuel breaks, and roadside and defensible space projects. These projects will also utilize educational tools to spread the Fire Safe message and engage community members."

The MCFSC will use its funds for fuel reduction projects "all over the Hill," said Edwina Scott, executive director. The MCFSC projects tend to complement the federal and state fuel breaks, by helping to fund work on private property, she added.

The California Fire Safe Council has been very good to us," Scott said. The funds should officially be available within a couple of months, according to Scott.

This grant is in addition to a larger Cal Fire grant of $600,000, which was announced in August for removal of dead or dying trees. Also, Riverside County 3rd District Supervisor Chuck Washington sent $4,000 in community improvement funds to help seniors and low-income residents meet the matching portion of the

It seems to me that lately, we've been hit a bit hard on the Hill. Individuals, families and our community together are coping with losses public and private, some associated with the fire, others with untimely deaths,

It may well sound insensitive or trite in the face of and more. Our task is to manage all this emotionally, psychologically. It can be a challenge to find a way these losses to suggest that simple gratitude can help us find that way. However, research shows that gratitude promotes health and healing. (See links above for the health effects associated with gratitude).

Gratitude is the active affirmation of goodness.

Practicing gratitude needs our commitment to spend time at it, actively acknowledging daily (or nightly before we go to sleep) what we are grateful for. And we need to keep at it. (See more suggestions below).

Why do we need to actively commit to practicing grat-

There's an odd fact about how our brains are designed. Tricky little neurons. Our brains are naturally wired to hold onto negative experiences much more than positive ones, even to the point of ruminating — the enemy of gratitude and peace of mind. We are ruminating when we get stuck in a cycle of negative thoughts about some past hurt; a cycle which increases our stress in the moment and brings us to no helpful resolution to the problem.

We just keep going round and round, like the snake eating its own tail — we end up right where we began and off we go again on another round. We always feel worse, numbed, bummed out or exhausted after a spell of rumination. And that's how it differs from being grateful. (For tips on overcoming ruminating, see last link above).

How to practice gratitude:

Keep a Gratitude Journal. Write down those things a daily or weekly basis you are grateful for. Nice to do just before bed.

Write a Gratitude Letter expressing thanks and de-

Savor the good in your life. Reminisce often about the good. Use all your senses to enhance these memories.

Psychologist Rick Hanson suggests practice guidelines. First, think about a good experience you are grateful for. Next, stay in the memory as long as possible. (This time it's OK to go over and over it).

Importantly, use all your senses to enhance that memory. Then, bring your attention to what is satisfying, rewarding and enjoyable about that experience. (This strengthens brain pathways that hardwire the benefits of gratitude).

Finally, gradually link the positive with the negative memory. If the positive has been strengthened through the previous steps, it can gradually replace the negative. If you find yourself overwhelmed by the negative, stop for a while and restart, leaving out the last step until you are adept at strengthening your positive memories.

Holocaust warning system

The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum recently unveiled its updated Early Warning Project. Developed by the Museum's Simon-Skjodt Center for the Prevention of Genocide and Dartmouth College, the Early Warning Project is a first-of-its-kind prevention tool that utilizes data analysis, crowd forecasting, and qualitative assessments to help policy makers identify countries at risk of atrocities to prioritize responses that could prevent such crimes. The tool focuses on atrocities against new victim groups; it does not forecast violence for ongoing

Part of the Early Warning Project is a Statistical Risk Assessment that focuses on countries with the greatest risk for atrocities against new victim groups, countries where risk has been consistent over time and countries where risk has increased or decreased significantly.

Accessible at earlywarningproject.ushmm.org, the Early Warning Project is one tool available to experts in government, NGOs, academia, and others who focus on genocide prevention. It aims to foster attention and discussion around places at high risk for violence, particularly countries that may be unexpectedly susceptible, and what options are available to mitigate those risks.

Two non-injury crashes on Hill roads over the last

At 3:55 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 6. Michael Beebe, 61, of Moreno Valley, was driving a silver 2004 Ford Explorer northbound on Highway 243, ½ mile north of Franklin Drive in Pine Cove. At the same time, Julio Neto, 39, of San Diego, was driving a white 2012 Toyota Prius southbound on 243, according to the California

Highway Patrol. Beebe failed to negotiate a curve, causing his Explorer to cross the yellow line and collide head on with Neto's Toyota Prius. The California Highway Patrol report indicated the road conditions were cloudy with snow. As a result, both vehicles were travelling at road-condition appropriate speeds. The head-on collision caused damage to both vehicles, requiring both to be towed by Idyllwild Garage. But neither Neto nor Beebe was hurt in the wrote, "I don't have a lot of confidence in the storm on Dec. 11 or 12 but there's potential for a couple weather systems between the 14th and 21st."

While a major storm this week is unlikely, Hill residents have been conditioned to be aware of looming inclement weather. Since August, Hill residents have been advised to prepare for evacuations and the closing of Highway 74 in case of severe precipitation.

The emergency first responders are aware of the Highway 243 closing and have discussed possible alternative plans in case a surprise weather system were to develop while Caltrans is working on Highway 243, according to Brooke Frederico, EMD senior public information specialist.

As of last week, all the emergency officials felt this was a good time for the Highway 243 repairs. The project's cost is estimated to be $500,000.

Issuance of burn permits restarted

As of Monday, Dec. 10, Riverside County residents may again apply for a burn permit. Issuance of the permits was suspended earlier this year. Cooler temperatures, higher humidity and winter weather have begun to diminish the threat of wildfire. Cal Fire Riverside Unit Chief Shawn C. Newman advises that those possessing current valid agriculture and residential burn permits can now resume burning on permissible burn days. Residents wishing to burn must verify it is a permissive burn day prior to burning by contacting the Air Quality Management District at www.aqmd.gov, or contacting Cal Fire/Riverside County Fire Department at 951-940-

If one wishes to burn a pile of debris or slash, the requirements are:

Do not burn on windy days.

- Only tumbleweeds may be burned. • The burning of trash, painted wood or other debris is
- Piles should be no larger than 4 feet in diameter and in height. You can add to a pile as it burns down.
- Clear a 10-foot diameter down to bare soil around your piles. Have a shovel and a water source nearby.

• An adult is required to be in attendance of the fire at Day and overnight campers should check with their area state and county parks to verify if permit requirements are in place or have been lifted to have a campfire. For more information on burning, visit the Cal Fire website at www.fire.ca.gov. To locate your closest fire station to obtain a burn permit, visit https://tinyurl.com/My-its useful life and this project will replace it. While it still functions, its capacity is limited, according to Shane Massoud, Caltrans public information officer.

Its current limited capability could result in more water passing over or flooding the highway. "A possible bigger storm could cause the culvert to fail. This will be a 24-hour operation. The contractor will have two fully staffed crews working 12-hour shifts to replace it as quickly as possible," said Massoud.

The engineer on site was concerned that failure to replace the culvert could eventually lead to a sinkhole.

Highway 243 is closed both directions just north of Lake Fulmor. However, a second project on Highway 243 between Skyland Ranch and Mt. Edna Road will result in a flagging operation. One lane will be open and a pilot vehicle will guide traffic through the work zone, but only in that area.

This work, slope repairs and drainage will be limited to two days — from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. both Tuesday, Dec. 11, and Wednesday, Dec. 12.

Highway 243 from there to north of Lake Fulmor remains closed until

Assault charges against Greene dismissed

Convicted of possession of firearm

By JP Crumrine News Editor

In August, Jeremy Greene, 23, of Oceanside, was arrested for the stabbing of Darryl Scholl in Idyllwild. However, last week at his preliminary hearing, the felony charge for assault with a deadly weapon was dismissed and the felony charge for "great bodily injury" was stricken. Greene, a convicted felon, was found guilty of possession of firearm. Riverside County Superior Court Judge Kelly Hansen imposed a three-year prison term for this conviction. He was given credit for already serving 213 days. Greene also had to sign a form relinquishing possession of all firearms.

His cousin, Alicia Berry said, "I'm very happy. The truth came out."

Hill votes for state offices

Two enclaves: one Democratic and one Republican

By JP Crumrine News Editor

The local voting for the statewide offices in the November election was fairly consistent.

The Idyllwild, Pine Cove and often the Mountain Center precincts voted in favor of the winning statewide candidate, usually a Democrat. The Garner Valley electorate was consistently voting for the Republican or Independent candidates, often with the nearly same total votes for different races.

For example, Gavin Newsom, the Democratic candidate for governor, was easily elected. He received more than 7.7 million votes, which was 62 percent of the total gubernatorial votes cast.

Idyllwild, Pine Cove and Mountain Center all cast a stance: majority of the votes from those precincts for Newsom, each was less than 60 percent. But nearly three-quarters of Garner Valley voters favored Republican John Cox.

A similar pattern was evident for secretary of state, attorney general, controller and treasurer races. Cox got 195 votes from Garner Valley. Mark Meuser, the Republican candidate for secretary of state got 190, as did Greg Conlon, the Republican candidate for treasurer. The Republican candidates for attorney general and member of the Board of Equalization got 193 votes each while the controller candidate received 184 votes.

The race between two Democrats for lieutenant governor was the only time that a majority of Garner Valley voters cast ballots consistent with the statewide total and other Hill precincts. All voted in support of Eleni

Editor's note: After the Riverside County Registrar of Voters certified the final count of ballots in the Nov. 6 election, the Town Crier spoke with state Sen. Jeff Stone, who was reelected to his second term in Sacramento.

"It was a pretty challenging election. And I take all my races seriously," Stone said.

He noted that his opponent, Democrat Joy Silver, had outspent him during the campaign. "But it is not always who raises the most money who wins," he said. "My fundraising ability is much greater, but I don't like to be beholding to special interests," he explained. "I like to be independent rather than have stakeholders." He complimented Silver and added that when some-you do the best that you can to help people," he added. Stone is excited about the new legislative session, al-

A primer for propane pricing and supply

By Marshall Smith STAFF REPORTER

Periodically, the Town Crier has sought information from Hill propane suppliers regarding pricing and other matters. Some companies will talk to us, others won't.

Propane suppliers are private companies, not regulated by state public utility commissions in the way public utilities such as natural gas, electric and water are regulated. And because pricing is based on market supply and demand, price per gallon charged by Hill suppliers can vary widely — from lows in the $2 range, up to high $4 or low $5 a

It's important that propane customers are savvy about what questions to ask before signing contracts or reaching agreements with Hill propane suppliers.

Price per gallon is only one component of being supplied propane. Other questions regard whether to pay annual tank rental charges (from the supplier) or buy a tank. Owning a tank often affords price per gallon discounts from suppliers and can allow a tank owner to switch propane suppliers

There are important questions regarding general servicing. For in-

- What has a lower per-gallon price, larger or smaller deliveries? There are sometimes additional charges for customers who use less propane over tracked periods.
- Is the quoted charge an "introductory offer"? If so, it is important to ask what your price per gallon will be on your next delivery?
- · Are there added charges on vour bill to be aware of such as fuel surcharges, regulatory compliance fees, HAZMAT and others, or are they included in the cost per gallon? Be certain to ask and then review the bill for accuracy.

- If one runs out of propane, is there an added charge to make an emergency delivery?
- Should you have a "fill as needed" contract where the supplier inspects your tank and fills it, or should you have a contract where you call in when you want your tank filled? If you forget to call in and your tank goes empty, you may have to pay a penalty.
- If one runs out of propane and their regular supplier does not respond in a reasonable time, can or will another company fill the tank?
- What can you do if you change companies and your old company won't pick up their tank?

Bottom line: Ask questions. You are the customer and suppliers will either answer your questions directly to your satisfaction or they will not. How they answer should help customers decide what suppliers to use.

Other than that price per gallon can vary widely during the propane season — less in the fall and more in the middle of winter — prices are based on price per gallon at a central supply source, such as Mt. Belvieu "Spot Price." Local suppliers then add on transportation costs from point of original supply to supplier storage facilities, and then transportation costs from storage facility to residence or business.

Over the last 10 years, Mt. Belvieu, Texas, spot price per gallons has gone from a high of $1.917 per gallon during the week of July 18, 2008, to a low of $0.308 during the week of Jan. 22, 2016.

The current Mt. Belvieu spot price is $0.739 as of the end of November 2018. According to the U.S. Energy Information Administration, the average propane price per gallon throughout the U.S. on Dec. 3, 2018, was $2.43.

Each propane review article for the balance of the heating season, we will talk with a different propane supplier, and get their pricing and other information that could be helpful to customers, especially firsttime Hill propane customers.

This week we talked to Billy Owen, co-owner with Robert Summerall of Advantage Propane. Owen, who has previously worked with SoCal and AmeriGas Propane suppliers, said he has worked all aspects of the propane business from driver to administration.

We treat our customers fairly," said Owen. "We don't have term contracts, other than for a tank lease. Our current price per gallon is $2.59. The only additional fee we charge is a HAZMAT fee [no fuel surcharge or regulatory compliance fee].

"Our tanks rent for $55 annually for a 250-gallon tank and $90 for a 500-gallon tank. We don't have any 'first fill' pricing. We have a 30,000-gallon tank storage field in Beaumont that allows us to be competitive. We're in Idyllwild a couple times a week. Our customers can either be 'on a route' where we monitor and fill as needed or on a 'will call" basis. Also, if someone accidentally runs out, we do not charge a fee for a special fill."

We encourage readers to contact us regarding what they are paying per gallon, other fees they are being charged, and how satisfied or not they are with their propane supplitheir favorite candidate. Silver got 239 votes from Pine Cove, which was only 50.7 percent of the ballots cast for this race. Stone received 232 votes.

But Garner Valley voters overwhelming preferred Stone, giving him 71.5 percent of their ballots. In Mountain Center, Stone outpolled Silver by three Four years ago, in his first campaign for Senate, Stone collected 53 percent of the vote to defeat fellow Republican Bonnie Garcia of Palm Desert. In that race, Idyllwild and Pine Cove cast more than 60 percent of their votes for the former supervisor.

Local Congressman Dr. Raul Ruiz was also reelected. The Democratic incumbent garnered 59 percent of the ballots cast for the 36th District race and Republican challenger Kimberlin Brown Pelzer collected 41 percent of the vote.

In 2016, Ruiz got 62 percent of the vote against Stone, which is his largest vote share and vote total. In 2012 and 2014, he got less than 55 percent in both elections.

But similar to the state Senate race, Idyllwild, Pine Cove and Mountain Center voters supported the Democrat while two-thirds of Garner Valley voters cast ballots for Pelzer.

Idyllwild voters strongly supported Ruiz, casting 63 of their ballots for him over Pelzer.

Hemet Unified School District

In the Hemet Unified School District race, former board president Ross Valenzuela was reelected to another four-year term. Incumbent Bob Davis, who was appointed in September 2017 when former director Joe Wojcik resigned, was the leading vote getter for the second seat and a full four-year term.

While most precincts, including Idyllwild, Pine Cove and Mountain Center, cast ballots similar to the whole school district, Garner Valley exhibited an independent streak. While Davis also was their top choice, Jamie Swain, a woman supporting more vocational courses, got 77 votes as the second choice, and Valenzuela was their third choice with 49 votes from Garner Valley.

But a book about Reiner's depictions of the trees of Los Angeles that compares him to the old monk poet Basho, who, it was said, would go into the mountains to pay tribute to specific trees, makes the point that the trees of cities may deserve our attention above all others.

The book is called "Lucas Reiner: Los Angeles Trees, 2001- of the devastation of city trees. 2008." It asks why artists took so Park, had commented on the savaging of urban trees as far back as

ART'S CORNER

Luigi Boccherini, Oboe Quintet, No. 17 in E flat major (two movements)

Franz Peter Schubert, String Quartet No. 14 in A minor (1st movement only)

Alexander Borodin, String Trio in G minor ("Variations on a Russian Folk Song"/"How Did I Hurt You" (single movement))

Ludwig van Beethoven, Piano Trio in C minor, Opus 1 No. 3 (2nd movement, Andante cantabile)

August Friedrich Martin Klughardt, Wind Quintet, Opus 79 (2nd/4th movements)

Johannes Brahms, Piano Trio No. 2 in C major, Opus 87 (2nd movement, Andante con moto)

The evening of Friday, Dec. 7, proved to be dry, but still briskly cool, in Idyllwild Arts' Lowman Concert Hall for the student chamber concert event that attracted a small but still appreciative audience, as the little more than half-occupied seats would attest. Beginning with a two-movement excerpt from Boccherini's E flat major Oboe Quintet, in which the accompanying string quartet evinced a more than pleasant atmosphere, one was assured of further pleasing student efforts.

However, the succeeding piece — the first movement of the late A minor String Quartet of Schubert, using the same string ensemble as the Boccherini — was a bit disappointing to this listener for an apparent lack of the songful qualities inherent in the work. Perhaps if they had chosen the final movement of that work to present, it would have displayed that aspect more fully, but that would have made the succeeding work — Borodin's one-movement G minor string trio (the "Variations on a Russian Folk Song"/"How Did I Hurt You") — seem even more trivial. Nevertheless, both works (the Borodin by two violins and a cello with different players) were presented with enough internal energy to counteract any other potential criticism.

The remaining items on the program included two slow movements from two different piano trios; Beethoven's early C minor trio (Opus 1 No. 3) and Brahms' later C major trio (Opus 87) thus forming the pillars of the event, with both pianists (Tong Su in the Beethoven and Muyu Liu in the Brahms) acquitting themselves very well in both execution and in keeping the respective string players in line with the varied musical emotions required.

And in between these monuments (as it were) came two movements of a wind quintet by Klughardt, which although somewhat derivative of his contemporary composers (Schumann, in particular) was essayed by a more than just ordinary effort by the players (in this case, all need to be singled out for exemplary ensemble playing — flutist Can Xu, oboist Fengyang Ju, hornist Junlang Guo, bassoonist Axel Liden and clarinetist Shangjun Jiang — who ought to get together again for the whole work, coupled maybe with another piece in the same genre by Franz Danzi, Anton Reicha or Louis Spohr how about it, guys?) which proved a solid eventual introduction to the program's last number, the Brahms andante con moto movement.

In all, the students of Idyllwild Arts provided a well-illumined and decorated holiday "tannenbaum," which the audience responded to with continued and well-deserved applause.

Local receives top hotelier award

Quiet Creek and Strawberry Creek inns Manager Marc Kassouf was awarded General Manager of the Year (small property) by the California Hotel and Lodging Association at Hotel Del Coronado in San Diego on

The Outstanding General Manager of the Year award honors a hotelier who has demonstrated superior professionalism in operating a CH&LA or California Bed & Breakfast member property, and taken a leadership role in the industry by actively participating in association, community or industry programs.

"On behalf of the entire family of us working at the STAY Idyllwild group of inns, Quiet Creek Inn and Strawberry Creek Inn, I'm elated to receive this award from the distinguished CH&LA independent awards committee and members," said Kassouf. This was the CH&LA's 125th-anniversary celebration combined with its annual Meeting and Stars of the Industry Luncheon.

Kassouf beat out managers at the Sonoma Valley Inn and the Tamarack Beach Resort for the coveted award.

"Having been chosen as Outstanding General Manager of the year for the state of California (small property) alongside the winner from the Omni San Francisco is a big deal: I'm very happy to represent all of Idyllwild and our inns as winning up against other much larger destinations, and distinguished inns and hotels of all sizes," Kassouf added.

Idyllwild School middle school students enjoyed the Holiday Dance Friday afternoon after school. Silliness, pajamas and smiles filled the Multipurpose Room.

Josie and Emilia were two of the Idyllwild Arts students who participated in the Creative Writing Lab Friday, Dec. 7, at the IAF Theatre. Jointly sponsored by the Creative Writing and Theatre departments, six short plays were presented. Students wrote, directed and acted in all the plays. Seven more were offered on Saturday evening. The audience appreciated this glimpse of the students talents. PHOTO BY TOM KLUZAK

World orphan choir returns in concert

The Matsiko World Orphan Choir will again perform for free this year at 7 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 23, at McNeil Hall at Idyllwild Pines Camp.

Matsiko is a Ugandan word for "hope." This word embodies both the children and the songs they sing.

The choir is made up of orphan children from several countries and reaches thousands of children with the hope of a brighter future. Proceeds generated by the choir tour and merchandise sales (authentic, hand-made gifts from their native countries) go directly to supporting life-changing educational sponsorship that affords orphaned children a chance at a university degree.

The Matsiko kids relish the chance to get a behindthe-scenes look at the real lives of working professionals. As they meet people during the tour, the children realize that their dream for a better life is attainable.

CREATURE CORNER

By Janice Murasko

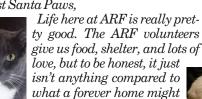

Last week in "Days of Our Nine Lives," the ARF cats welcomed George back into the cattery.

New Sadie: Bernard, what are you doing?

Bernard: Writing a letter to Santa Paws. Pepper: Oh! What are you asking for?

Please read us the letter. Bernard: OK, but it's not yet finished.

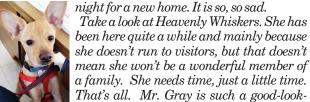

Here's what I have: Dearest Santa Paws.

be. Take Tex, for instance. Mr. Gray

She is such a wonderful, Zeus loving dog who would be such a great hiking or jogging partner. She just doesn't like to share her home with cats or another dog. Is that so terrible? My heart is breaking for her. And Zeus and Bear? What awesome cats they are. Their guardian passed away, and now they quietly cry at seat in the cattery, he jumps into her lap, and that is because he knows her. Why won't other humans take a few minutes to get to know him? George was with ARF for a while and then was adopted, but sadly his guard- New Sadie ian fell on tough times and couldn't keep him. So here he is, back with us. But he is awesome! What a friendly guy!

Bernard: Well, that's all I have, so far. I'll read more to you as soon as I'm ready!

Be sure to keep up with the animal antics of "Days of Our Nine Lives" each week. And please stop in to say hello to the entire adoptable cast at the ARF House, 26890 Hwy. 243 on Saturdays 10-4 and Sundays 10-2, or by appointment M-F by calling 951-659-1122.

By Jack Clark Contest Judge

Well, I thought last week's photo was far too easy. But I received only one entry — and it wasn't correct, so ... go figure. I'm supplying a whole different photo subject this week because I can't figure out how to redo last week's photo without making it silly obvious. So, where have you seen the subject of today's photo?

The Town Crier contest prizes are supplied through the courtesy and generosity of the Red Ket— so, please, let's remember to patronize their fine establishments.

One entry per household. Contest deadline: Monday noon. Not a race — correct entries go into a hat for a drawing. Full contest rules and guidelines available at the Town Crier office. Email entries to jack@towncrier.com.

New Spirit offers 12th toy drive New Spirit Love, a nonprofit, is hosting its 12th-an-

Track Santa's journey Christmas Eve The North American Aerospace Defense Command is a United States and Canada binational organization charged with the mission of aerospace warning, aerospace control and maritime warning in the defense of North America. It also tracks Santa Claus every Dec. 24 through the NORAD Tracks Santa program.

Now, the 63rd iteration of NORAD Tracks Santa kicked off Dec. 1, with a more mobile-friendly website, social media channels, "Santa Cam" streaming video and a call center that will be operating around the clock on Dec. 24. More than 1,400 volunteers are expected to join NORAD on Peterson Air Force Base in Colorado Springs to help track Santa's journey.

Since 1955, NORAD has used satellites, high-powered radar, jet fighters and special Santa cameras to track Santa Claus as he makes his journey around the world.

To follow Santa on Christmas Eve, visit www.noradsanta.org/.

Red Cross seeks volunteers

The American Red Cross is seeking local volunteers. Meetings are about once a month.

Volunteers are needed to set up a shelter in Idyllwild during a disaster, be prepared for floods and manage disasters.

Especially now, with the increased risk of mud/rock slides, and flooding from the burn scar, there may be more of a need for shelter openings in the future.

For more information, contact Dennie Ohrazda at 574-370-8282 or dennieohrazda@ gmail.com; Dick Goldberg at 310-941-1653 or dickmgoldberg@gmail.com; or Tracy Phillipi at 951-795-6093 or animalguy4u@hotmail.
