ACLU lawsuit on county redistricting in federal court

By JP CRUMRINE
CORRESPONDENT

In December 2021, the Riverside County Board of Supervisors approved a plan to redraw the boundaries of its five supervisorial districts as a result of the 2020 Federal Census. Six months later, in June, the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) filed a lawsuit on behalf of the Inland Empire United and six individuals, challenging the legality of the Riverside County redistricting plan.

The suit alleges the plan is discriminatory and unrepresentative of the county's population. The suit argues that the board should have chosen a plan that would have created two districts with a majority Latino population. By failing to make that decision, the board and county is diluting the Latino vote, and limiting the Latino population's opportunity to equally participate in the county political process, according to the ACLU filing.

On June 14, 2022, the legal action was filed in the Riverside County Superior Court. With no delay, apparently anticipating the litigation, the county counsel filed a motion to shift the case to the U.S. District Court for the Central District of California, Eastern Division.

The plaintiffs filed a motion to return the case to the state Superior Court. A hearing was scheduled for Dec. 2, but the federal court decided the filings from both the ACLU and county counsel were sufficient to make the decision, which is still pending.

The attorneys for the plaintiffs argued that the federal court lacked jurisdiction since their action was based solely on California election law. The state's Fair Maps Act (FMA) is the basis for their filing. Although the Federal Voting Right Act (VRA) is referenced, that was only once. Further they argued that state law incorporates the VRA in its language.

The court asked both parties to respond to its question regarding whether the FMA establishes a cause of action against a local redistricting body for failure to properly apply the

Molly & Milty — A Love Story

By KEN LUBER
IDYLLWILD AUTHOR

Editor's note: This is another of a series of installments of a short story local author Kenneth Luber has written. See prior week Town Criers for the other installments.

Fred stared at me and blinked. I didn't wait for another word from his lips. I did one of my famous twirls, a kind of two-footed pirouette and streaked from the living room.

It was snowing when I called for an outside roof-meeting with Chester and Gabriella the Princess. Milty doesn't like the snow and was snoozing in the house. I explained the situation to my two feline friends. I had been selected to show Floppy Ears the ways of the house. He had been in all of the rooms. That was easy to see because his brown and white hair was everywhere, but Chester quickly pointed out, "He doesn't know what any of the rooms mean." Gabriella jingled her jeweled bells and agreed. "Function," she said. "He needs to know how the function of each room changes a hotel into a home."

Hotel into a home.... I really liked that. Princess Gabriella always had a way with meows.

Three days later it was still snowing and I was ready to start. I watched Fred reverse the car to the street and drive away. He had already taken Milty out for his morning walk. As usual when it snowed, Milty was snoozing in his bed. I playfully rubbed my nose against him, something I'd never done before. He blinked his eyes, rose on his front legs and opened his big yap with a yawn. I thought his tongue was going to hit the floor. I pushed a smile across my sweet lips, doing everything to show him I was being friendly. I kind of jerked my head to the side, turned and trotted to the kitchen door. When I looked back, Milty was sniffing at a pail of sand the workers had left. I jerked my head again. This time I heard his paws tapping against the linoleum behind me. Honestly, just about any mutt in the Animal Kingdom would have followed my cute sway.

First stop, of course, was the family room off the kitchen. I pointed my nose toward the TV and pawed open a cabinet to show him board games and toys left over from years before, when Fred and Betty's son Bruce was small. When I glanced back, Milty was staring out the window watching snowflakes fall. Even my "meow" didn't change Milty's focus.

He was only a step behind when I entered the dining room. I made a graceful leap onto the table and immediately went to the silver candlestick holders. I figured that by now, having seen Fred eat at the kitchen table a ton of times, Milty knew what a table was for. I wanted him to see that this table with silver candlesticks — from Mexico Miss Betty had told me — was for special occasions. Sadly, he couldn't see my point because he was under the table, woofing and gnawing on his leather bone. I was losing patience. I didn't see a reason for going into the den since Milty had just about made it his second sleeping chamber, sprawled on the sofa or an armchair or lapping up whatever crumbs he found on the coffee table. Instead, with a sweet purr and jerk of my head I started for the laundry room. Milty dropped the bone from his mouth, crawled out from under the dining room table and followed me.

This was going to be a slam-dunk. A basket of Fred's dirty clothes was parked in one corner, a box of soap sat on top of the shiny white washer and a few rags hung from a rope over the big sink. When I looked over to Milty, he was pulling a flowery bed sheet with his teeth out of the room. That was it. He had paid absolutely no attention to the family room, the dining room and now the easiest mark of all, the laundry room. There was no point in taking him upstairs. I, frankly, was furious. I jumped off the dryer and streaked past him straight to the kitchen, barreled out the doggy door and tried too cool myself down in a big snow bank.

I was still ranting when Fred walked into the house, sneezing, coughing, and wiping his nose. "I tried!" I yelled, racing into the living room. "I tried to be a guide, I tried to be a friend, I tried to educate Milty to the functions of this fake Tudor house! He doesn't learn, Fred. He just can't stay on point!" Fred tossed his briefcase down on his chair and sneezed. "And look at you," I said. "You're sneezing, coughing, in the grips of walking pneumonia! Why?" I hurtled onto the couch to a more oratorical position. "Because you're outside walking that hound in the middle of a winter storm! You don't walk me. I don't have a leash with a collar around my neck! I don't even have a

Triple threat leads to serious health care problems

The Centers for Disease Control (CDC) relates that this year's cold and flu season has been severe. COVID, flu and respiratory syncytial virus have combined to stress our health care system, decreasing our hospitals' capacities and resulting in staffing shortages. The CDC advises that everyone eligible get the original vaccines and the updated booster. This is especially important since Riverside County is now rated at a "medium" community level, up from the previous rating of "low."

On Tuesday, Jan. 3, the Hemet Unified School District dashboard reported no cases of COVID among either students or staff at Idyllwild School, Hemet High, Hamilton primary or Hamilton secondary.

jeweled collar, let me remind you. No sir. I've got a box, a nice, perfumed box in the laundry room. I've got brains enough to do my toilet business indoors. You don't have to get a sunburned nose walking me in the summer or risk death taking me outdoors in the middle of an ice storm!"

"You're getting overly dramatic again, Molly. Milton just needs time. You know he was abused."

"I don't want to hear that word 'abused' again, Fred!"

I was through trying to be a good sport. When I told Chester and Gabriella the Princess, they couldn't believe Milty's indifference or Fred's displeasure with me. I won't say I sulked. Cats aren't sulkers. I hate to say this, but, honestly, cats don't have the attention span for sulking. But I stayed in the top compartment of my scratching tree for several days.

Molly & Milty return next week.

ACLU lawsuit

act's mandatory ranked criteria or "adopting district boundaries for the purpose of favoring or discriminating against a political party" and whether the state constitution, independently or in conjunction with the FMA, is a basis to challenge a redistricting scheme that denies a cohesive bloc of minority voters the opportunity to elect their candidates of choice.

The ACLU response stressed that its litigation was primarily based on the Fair Maps Act, which prohibits establishing boundaries that favor or discriminate against political parties. Further, both the act and State Constitution allow for challenges to protect individual's and a class member's right to vote and elect a candidate of choice.

The county's response stressed that the plaintiff's initial filing made a strong case of relying on the VRA.

"Plaintiffs included approximately forty paragraphs in their complaint tracking the language and standards of the VRA in order to allege an actionable apportionment claim, and why Plaintiffs rejected Defendants' offer to stipulate to a remand if Plaintiffs would amend the complaint to delete the allegations regarding the Redistricting Plan's failure to comply with the VRA."

The ACLU's final response argued that a state court could make a ruling without relying on the VRA and, therefore, the case should be remanded to the Riverside County Superior Court.

Neither the June 2022 primary nor the November general election were targets of the litigation. If the ACLU prevails, a representative said they hope the 2024 primary and election will be held with revised districts.

The Federal Court canceled a scheduled hearing for oral arguments on Dec. 2 and will make its ruling based on the written submissions.

As the county goes through this legal process, it's important to note that the county believes it went through rigorous statistical analyses by well-respected experts and consultants to ensure that all voters have a meaningful ability to elect the candidates of their choice. This method included analyzing citizen voting age population data, a racially polarized voting analysis and an opportunity to elect report, in addition to holding many community meetings and public hearings, to ensure that residents have fair and equal representation.

With the recent electoral win from Yxstian Gutierrez for the 5th District supervisor seat, there will soon be two Latino supervisors in the fourth and fifth districts.

STR fire risk

DEAR EDITOR:

Here's a new one. My short-term rental (STR) neighbor had a guest staying the other day who was running an electrical cable out a bedroom window and plugged into their electric vehicle (EV). (See photo far right.)

A quick internet search found several articles relating to EV recalls for potential fire-causing failures, as well as some airports banning EVs from their parking facilities for the same reason.

Reminds me of an iconic “The Wizard of Oz” scene, “How about a little fire, Scarecrow?” Well, I don't know about you, but it frightens me to see people come here to stay in STRs and so many are oblivious to the fire dangers they are bringing into our village that we locals worry about year round. Much less the clueless and careless owners who seem ignorant and/or ambivalent to our unending concerns for the many dangers they are bringing into our fragile community with these unwanted guests in our once “residential” (R1A-zoned) community. It sickens me. What about you?

Public Notices
Legals · Doing Business As

For questions about Public Notices call the Town Crier (951) 659-2145 or Email: mandy@towncrier.com

Every day throughout the United States, newspapers publish thousands of public notices about events, conditions or actions that affect countless individuals, families, neighborhoods and businesses. Public notices cover many topics, including business matters, liquor licensing, public auctions and sales, estates, zoning, public meetings, bids to sell goods and services to the government, local government finances and state and local elections. Public notice is a fundamental component of our system of representative democracy, which depends upon the participation of educated, responsible citizens.

DR. I. CICLE'S WEATHER SCHOOL

I'm puzzled, Dr. Cicle. What are cold fronts and warm fronts?

Good question, Paula! Cold fronts and warm fronts are something meteorologists—scientists who study the weather—watch to make predictions about the weather.

Oh no! A cold wind blew my display about weather fronts all apart! Luckily, I numbered each sentence. Do the math problem on each piece. Then use the answers to put the sentences in order from the smallest number to the largest.

8+7=

Cold fronts move quickly and can bring storms and even hail. But the storms won't last long.

4+3=

The sun's heat warms the air. Some parts of the world get warmer than others. These differences in temperature make the air move, causing weather to change.

20-8=

This cools the warm air, and if there is moisture in that air, it condenses and forms drops that fall as rain or snow.

19-3=

A "warm front" moves slowly. If the air is moist, dark clouds will form and it may rain or snow for days.

6+3=

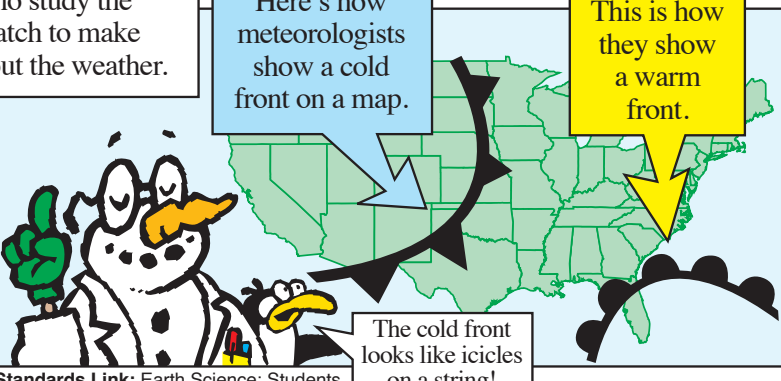

A "cold front" happens when a cold air mass pushes the warm air up.

17-9=

When cold and warm air masses meet, they don't mix. They form a front.

Standards Link: Earth Science: Students understand how to read a weather map.

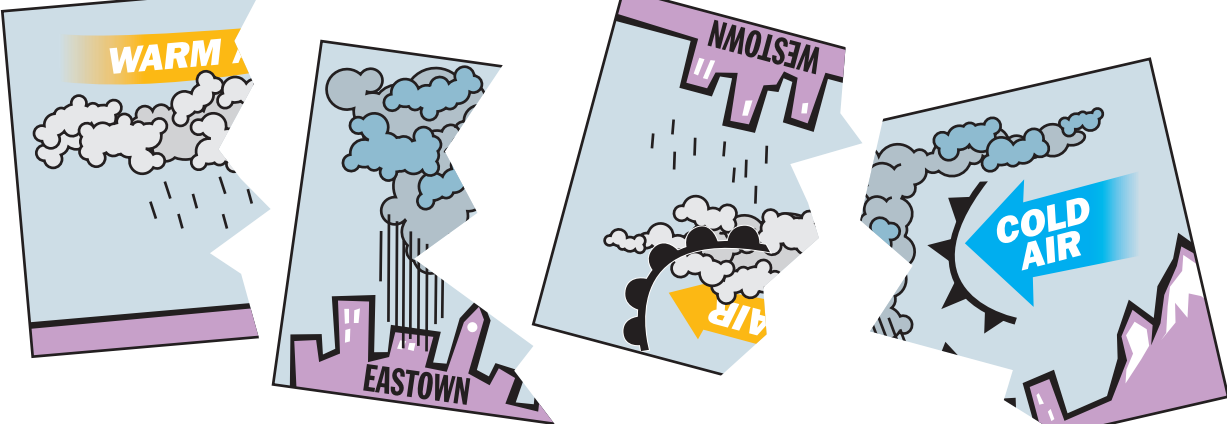

Here's how meteorologists show a cold front on a map.

This is how they show a warm front.

The cold front looks like icicles on a string!

Standards Link: Number Sense: Students compute sums and differences, order numbers from least to greatest.

Extra! Extra!

Cool Division

Search through the newspaper for the following numbers:

- Numbers divisible by 2
- Numbers divisible by 3
- Numbers divisible by 5

Standards Link: Number Sense: Students know rules of divisibility.

Help Paula Predict the Weather

Look at the two weather puzzles. Which town is most likely to have stormy weather? Use the cold front and warm front symbols to help you predict.

Standards Link: Earth Science: Students understand that weather can be observed and predicted; different conditions affect different results.

Weather Watchers

Look through the newspaper for three people and/or companies who need to watch the weather to make decisions. For example, outdoor games can be canceled if the weather is bad. Tell how the weather can affect each of the weather watchers you selected.

Standards Link: Earth Science: Students know the effects of changes in the weather.

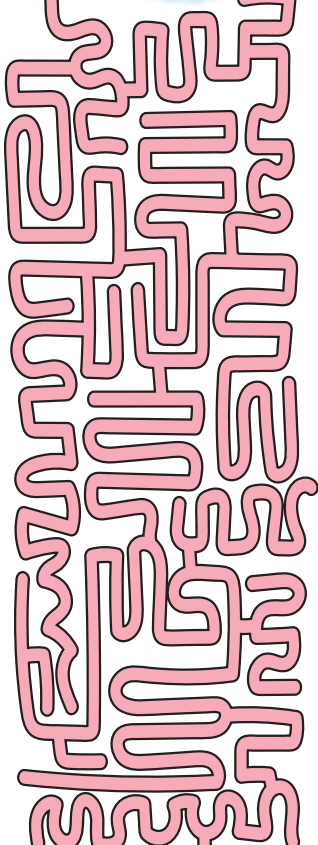

What song do you sing at a snowman's birthday party?

ANSWER: Freeze a Jolly Good Fellow.

Kid Scoop Together Snowman Run

You choose one snowman. A family member chooses the other. Who can race through their maze to reach the scarf first?

Kid Scoop VOCABULARY BUILDERS

This week's word: PREDICTION

The noun prediction is a statement that something might happen in the future.

The weatherman made a prediction that it would rain today.

Try to use the word prediction in a sentence today when talking with your friends and family.

ATTENTION CONTRACTORS

California Business and Professions Code 7071.13 reads: "Any reference by a contractor in his advertising, soliciting, or other presentments to the public to any bond required to be filed pursuant to this chapter is a ground for the suspension of the license of such contractor."

This is a contractor's responsibility, not a newspaper's, and we are not responsible for it. However, as a courtesy, we will remove references to a bond in contractors' advertising, if we notice it.

CREATURE CORNER

By JANICE MURASKO
Last week in "Days of Our Nine Lives," ARF cats discussed Santa's visits.
Atlas: Happy New Year everyone!
Phil: Thank you, Atlas! It's difficult to believe that it is already 2023.
Atlas: We have a special reason to celebrate. ARF has two new dogs.
Harley: Fabulous! Are they the ones coming into the room now?
Onyx: Yes! They are Grace and her daughter Joy.
Grace: Hello ARF cats! I'm Grace, three-and-a-half years old, and this is my daughter Joy who is three years.
Onyx: Welcome to ARF! I see you're comfortable around cats. What else can you tell us?
Joy: Hi guys! Both Mom and I are house and crate trained. We are fine with cats, and dogs are okay, too, as long as we are properly introduced.
Onyx: Doesn't it go without saying that all dogs need to be properly introduced to each other?
Grace: Absolutely! I am very curious while Joy just loves to be near me or humans.
Pepper: I heard that you both have fairly low energy.
Joy: That is correct, and we bark only to alert.
Atlas: So both of you would like a home where someone is around a lot.
Grace: Right. And we'd really like to stay together. We keep each other company as well as making humans feel loved.
Harley: You're both pretty small, so you won't take up much room.
Joy: We don't need a huge house, but we'd love to have some sort of secure yard.
Atlas: You're both so cute.
Phil: And your foster said you're both very friendly, sweet, and affectionate.
Grace: That says everything about us!

HOROSCOPES

January 2023 — Week 1

March 21 – April 19
Make a start on that new workplace challenge. But get more information before you find yourself too deeply involved without knowing in which direction you should go.

April 20 – May 20
You might find things becoming tedious as your schedule slows down after the holidays. Use this time to get information about a possible post-New Year job change.

May 21 – June 21
The creative Twin finds outlets for his or her ideas in the early part of the week. The practical Twin takes it a step further and rallies support to turn the ideas into reality.

June 22 – July 22
It's time to stop being intimidated by someone's negative behavior. Start taking positive steps on your own to help strengthen your position down the line.

July 23 – August 22
Look closely at that so-called golden opportunity. Best to be a cautious Cat who approaches things slowly, rather than one who pounces without knowing where you'll land.

August 23 – September 22
Your apology can resolve that personal situation before it overshadows the start of your new year. You'll feel better, even if you're only partly to blame for what happened.

September 23 – October 22
Avoid overtaxing yourself, even if your energy levels are high and you feel that you can do it all. Best to pace yourself so you won't run yourself down.

October 23 – November 21
Your sense of humor helps get you through a stressful period. Some of your quick quips can take the edge off any remaining negativity being aimed at you.

November 22 – December 21
Your artistic talents not only help you express yourself these days, but they also set up a line of communication between you and someone very special.

December 22 – January 19
It's fine to appreciate the importance of having a "proper form" for doing things. But relax a bit in order to allow newcomers on the project to feel less intimidated by you.

January 20 – February 18
Use your boundless reserve of optimism to persuade others to work with you so that you can resolve a difficult workplace problem before it ruins the dynamics in place.

February 19 – March 20
You brim over with self-confidence as you begin to tackle a new challenge. And, before you know it, you're not alone: Others have taken the plunge with you.
