Trump wants more timber cut in National Forests

Cites economic and forest management concerns, while environmental groups push back

By JP CRUMRINE
CORRESPONDENT

On March 1, President Donald Trump signed two more Executive Orders. One is intended to increase timber production on the forested lands of the U.S. Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management. Its purposes are to increase timber production and to improve land management.

The EO specifies a schedule of actions, with which both the Secretaries of Agriculture and of the Interior are to comply. Within 30 days, the first step is for each to "... issue new or updated guidance regarding tools to facilitate increased timber production and sound forest management, reduce time to deliver timber, and decrease timber supply uncertainty..."

Also, any legislation needed should be submitted to the Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

Goal posts are also specified for 60 days, 90 days, 120 days, 180 days and 280 days. At the 90-day point, Agriculture and Interior are to propose a four-year plan to offer millions of board feet for sale.

The EO tells the Cabinet Secretaries to consider establishing a categorical exclusion to speed the process of the sales through the National Environmental Protection Act requirements.

Another goal is consideration of creating a new categorical exclusion for timber thinning and re-establishing the categorical exclusion for timber salvage activities.

Trump also signed a second EO affecting the timber industry. This EO addresses national security of the timber industry and directs the Secretary of Commerce to investigate the effects on the national security of "... imports of timber, lumber, and their derivative products."

Reaction to both Orders was consistent with past positions. The timber industry lauded Trump and environmental groups opposed the expansion of timber harvests.

The American Forest Resource Council praised the Executive Orders as long-overdue steps toward responsible federal forest management and economic revitalization.

"These are common sense directives Americans support and want from their federal government, which owns about 30 percent of our nation's forests," said Travis Joseph, AFRC president in their press release. "Our federal forests have been mismanaged for decades. Americans have paid the price in almost every way. ... Our federal forests are facing an emergency. It's time to start treating it like one by taking immediate action."

However, Josh Hicks, Director of Conservation Campaigns at The Wilderness Society, sees it differently. "It's a short-sighted giveaway for extractive industries that will result in destruction for the very places that provide us clean air, water, and sustain many local economies driven by tourism and recreation. Leaders in Congress must stand up and oppose these far-reaching attacks and look to finding real solutions for our communities, wildlife, and public forests."

There are 154 national forests, of which the San Bernardino National Forest, is one. They comprise more than 188 million acres. The BLM manages another 58 million forested acres.

According to the AFRC, only 35 percent of national forests are available for timber harvests, while 65 percent is designated for non-timber uses, such as wilderness.

Short-term rental problems expanding in County

By JP CRUMRINE
CORRESPONDENT

Six months, after Planning Director John Hildebrand gave the Board of Supervisors a six-month report on the implementation of revised Ordinance 927.2, "Regulating Short-Term Rentals," he is now asking for an urgent interim ordinance.

This time neither the Hill communities nor the Wine Country are responsible or involved. Hildebrand requested a 45-day temporary moratorium on new STRs within the unincorporated areas of Thousand Palms, and B Bar H Ranch.

The moratorium will be in effect from its adoption on Tuesday, March 11 to Friday, April 25.

During the moratorium Planning staff will hold meetings to consider the appropriateness of density control measures and potential caps for these unique areas, while drafting amendments to Ordinance No. 927, according to Hildebrand.

"Together, these two small areas of the County have experienced impacts of an above average density of STRs; the areas currently include 68 active and pending Short Term Rental certificates. Additionally, the intake of new applications for STR certificates for these areas is growing," he wrote explaining the need for the immediate moratorium elsewhere in the County.

Neighbors have been experiencing frequent (typical) adverse effects. Examples that he mentioned, familiar to Hill residents, include unpermitted large-scale events, excessive noise, disorderly conduct, traffic congestion, illegal vehicle parking, and accumulation of refuse.

The unincorporated County area of Thousand Palms is located along Interstate 10 at the intersection of Ramon Road, and is characterized by mobile home subdivisions, single-family residential neighborhoods and rural residential development, with some commercial and industrial developments, according to the request.

The B Bar H Ranch is an unincorporated community comprised of predominantly low-density residential, located between Palm Springs and Desert Hot Springs in the Seven Palms Valley.

The Peak welcomes new restaurant manager Matt Eker

By DAVID JEROME

The Peak at Tahquitz Pines has a new Restaurant Manager, Matt Eker. Eker says he has managed fine dining restaurants in the San Diego area for over 20 years and now lives in Hemet. Asked what kind of changes he may bring, he said there would be a new menu within a month and has a predilection for seafood and vegetarian options.

The Peak will still be hosting events like their Line Dancing Night and Mariachi Night. Eker said that the Idyllwild International Festival of Cinema was expecting 250 attendees for the weekend screenings in their upstairs ballroom. "I am excited, everything is new to me, I like the challenge, and I am excited to work with my team here. We're looking forward to great things, especially for summertime. We have exciting things planned."

Rain, not enough to change drought conditions, but expected

By JP CRUMRINE
CORRESPONDENT

While drought conditions still overlay most of Riverside County, the past four weeks have taken a toll on the dry weather. This weekend more than a foot of snow fell on the Hill and some more is expected this week. This is in contrast with the warm weather at the end of February, when Idyllwild set record minimum high temperatures.

Since 2020 90% of 247 U.S. cities have set more heat records than cold. The low was 40 degrees on Feb. 26 and a comfortable 46 on March 1. These were both 3 degrees warmer than the previous lows in 2002 and 2020.

From Feb. 11 through March 4, the percentage of the state in the worst drought stages (severe or exceptional) decreased from 21 percent to 15 percent. The percentage of California with no drought conditions increased from 33 percent to 42 percent.

The Hill is in extreme drought conditions.

One indicator of that is the amount of rain since the beginning of 2025, through March 9. Idyllwild Fire has recorded 5.0 inches, and 5.3 inches have fallen in Pine Cove. The historical average for the first two months of the year has been 8.7 inches!

On Thursday, Alex Tardy, Warning Coordination Meteorologist, in the San Diego National Weather Service office, described the first storm as "... more widespread significant precipitation. ..." But he noted there will be three storms which will make a significant contribution to lessening drought conditions.

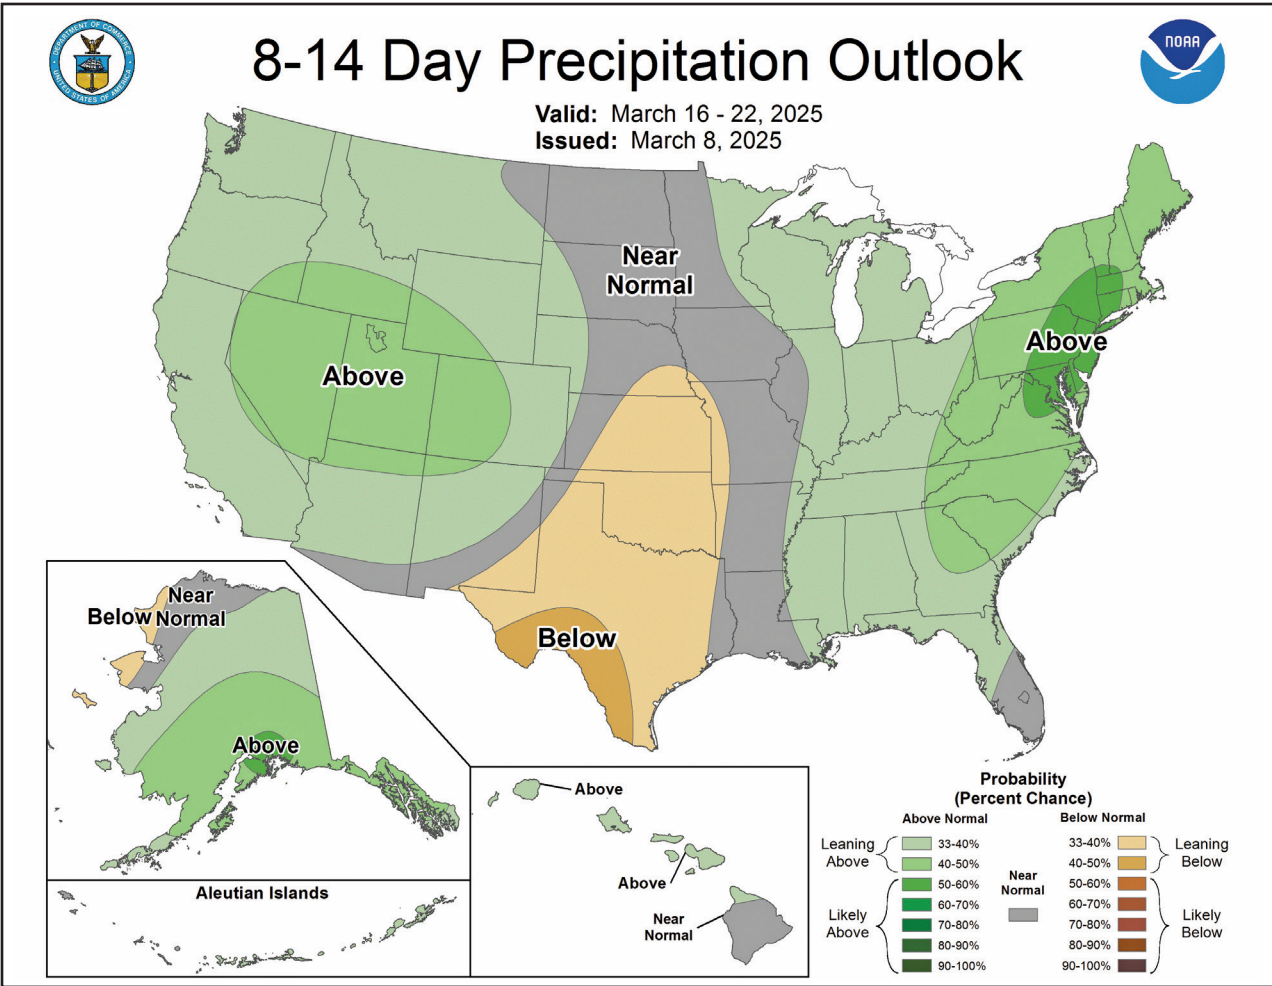

He also forecasted 12 to 18 inches of snow about 5,000 feet and the reports from Idyllwild and Pine Cove confirm that volume of snow. The NWS reported 14 inches fell in Pine Cove This should benefit ground water and the streams as it melts.

The snow fall was sufficient to affect local entities. The U.S. Forest Service's San Bernardino National Forest Office posted this on X, formerly Twitter. "Our Office in Idyllwild is Closed Today. The San Jacinto Ranger District office is closed today due to snow. ... Stay safe out there!"

Lower elevations such as Anza and Poppet Flats collected 1.0 inches to 1.8 inches of rain by Friday afternoon.

Dr. Daniel Swain, meteorologist and climate scientist at the Institute of the Environment and Sustainability at the University of California, Los Angeles, expects beneficial precipitation conditions to continue over the next two weeks.

"... it looks like the precipitation from this upcoming active period should be pretty widespread and well-distributed statewide, with SoCal likely to see 2 separate events with at least widespread moderate (locally heavy) rain during this period," he wrote on Weather West, his website, Thursday, March 6.

The Center for Western Weather and Water Extremes, at Scripps Institution of Oceanography at the University of California, San Diego forecast two separate Atmospheric Rivers would pass over Southern California this week.

Of the two storms this week, the NWS forecast that the Wednesday through Friday storm would be stronger and colder. Snow levels will be around 4,000 feet.

Longer term cool and wet weather may diminish as March does leave as a lamb.. Contributing to this change is the gradual disappearance of La Niña conditions. Typically, La Niña's bring cooler and much wetter weather to Southern California, except this year. Because the jet streams were further north than normal, accounting for the heavy rain in Northern California and the limited rain here. However, the NWS is forecasting neutral conditions (neither favoring La Niña or El Niño) will return by May.

"That substantial La Niña event, which has likely played at least a partial role in the SoCal/Southwest dryness so far this winter, has still largely retained its influence into March and still appears to be affecting the broader atmosphere for now," Swain wrote.

"... latest indications continue to suggest that a drier-than-average spring and early summer is still favored across SoCal..." Swain continued. "... in general, I am still anticipating an earlier and more intense start to the wildfire season than usual across the interior Southwest and likely SoCal."

dermess and other areas set aside for protection. For the past 20 years, forest mortality (tree death) on national forests has exceeded timber harvest.

On average, the Forest Service takes 3.6 years to complete necessary environmental paperwork before beginning mechanical treatments on national forest lands, according to a June 2022 study by the Property and Environment Research Center. This work would include critical thinning and fuel reduction projects to reduce wildfire risks to communities and infrastructure.

The Sierra Club stressed in its press release that "Our federal forests belong to all of us and are required by law to be managed in ways that benefit all Americans. Left standing, mature trees and old-growth forests provide clean air and water, opportunities for recreation, habitat for wildlife, and help to mitigate the worst effects of climate change. Our biggest, oldest trees are also the most resilient to the impacts of wildfire, with their thick protective bark and higher canopies, but these trees are also the most valuable to logging companies."

Overseeing the Forest Service's assignments will be its new Chief, Tom Schultz. In his introduction, on the USFS website (www.fs.usda.gov/inside-fs/leadership/meet-tom-schultz-21st-chief-forest-service), he wrote, "I am the first Chief who did not come from or previously work within the agency, but I hope you will see that as I do—as a strength."

"Years of fire suppression and declining timber harvest have left us with significant fuel buildup," Schultz wrote. "I want us to do more to create resilient forests through active forest management, including timber sales, fuels reduction through mechanical thinning and prescribed fires, as well as fighting fires safely and protecting resource values."

No response has been received from the SBNF External and Legislative Affairs Officer, Naomi Gordon, about how these Executive Orders may affect the SBNF and the San Jacinto Ranger District.

Appeal claims lack of due process for Oyler

By JP CRUMRINE
CORRESPONDENT

Editor's Note: in our Feb. 27 edition, we reported on the status of Raymond Lee Oyler's appeals of his March 2009 arson and murder convictions. He was found guilty of arson, igniting the Esperanza Fire in October 2006. The jury also found him guilty of the murder of five U.S. Forest Service firefighters who died battling the Esperanza Fire. Oyler's jury imposed the death sentence. All of the convictions and the death penalty were upheld in June 2009.

This story further elaborates on the issues which Oyler is appealing. These all occurred following his arrest in October 2006 and the confirmation of the jury's decision in June 2009. These are not the issues raised in the habeas corpus appeal, which would address evidentiary issues not occurring in the trial.

Michael Clough, Oyler's appellant attorney, began his 464-page appeal with the issue of Oyler's right to an appointed attorney. This right to legal representation was established nearly a century ago, when the U.S. Supreme Court upheld Powell v. Alabama in 1932. The State Supreme Court has issued decisions also establishing this right to counsel.

To protect and to enhance this constitutional guarantee, both the State Legislature and the Judicial Council have established a comprehensive set of statutes and Rules of the Court. In California, these rules allow the court to appoint a second counsel for capital defendants.

At Oyler's initial arraignment, attorney Mark McDonald accompanied him to court. In June 2007, McDonald told the court Oyler was an indigent and his family's resources were exhausted in defending him. McDonald asked the Court to appoint a second attorney, which occurred in April 2008 with the appointment of Thomas Eckhardt.

Before then, in October, Michael Hestrin, the Riverside County prosecutor, asked the court to assess McDonald's qualifications to handle a capital case.

Clough stressed that Hestrin was not questioning McDonald's qualifications, only whether Oyler was fully informed about his attorney's experience.

Nevertheless, Clough pressed the issue of whether Oyler had adequate and sufficient representation given the seriousness of the charges filed against him. The second issue, which Clough raised, was whether Oyler's right to a fair trial was abrogated when the judge refused a request to change the venue (where the trial would occur) from Riverside County.

The request was filed in August 2008 and McDonald argued that the extensive media coverage of the fire and the concomitant deaths had been extensive. Further, a public memorial, statement from public officials, headlines and constant coverage over time, continued to put the fire and the defendant in the news and before prospective jurors. This negated the defense's ability to find fair and impartial jurors in Riverside County, McDonald claimed.

While a media analyst, whom McDonald had hired, argued that many, many prospective jurors were aware of the fire and the trial, Judge W. Charles Morgan, the second judge assigned to the trial, denied the motion to change the venue at a November 2008 hearing.

"I bet we can find easily, from these statistics, a jury that doesn't even know Esperanza and the death of persons," he opined. "They won't even be able to make the connection of the specific fire, let alone the client."

A third critical issue that Clough raises is whether Hestrin actually had sufficient evidence to charge Oyler with starting all 23 fires. There was evidence that Oyler was responsible for three fires, and his defense team conceded that during their closing argument.

However, no direct evidence of Oyler's presence at the Esperanza Fire site has been presented. Thus, Clough challenged Hestrin's theory and allegation that all of the Banning fires were started by one arsonist.

Years later, Ed Nordskog, an arson/bomb investigator with the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department, opined that there were at least two serial arsonists operating in the Banning area during the 2006 and 2007 when the 23 fires were ignited.

Clough raises six other trial issues, besides these three. Several of which have subordinate issues. The appeal document was 464 pages long.

In his conclusion, Clough argued that while it may be true that none of the issues which he raises are sufficient singularly to overturn the verdicts; the cumulative effect of so many issues should result in a reversal. Consequently, Oyler was denied his due process of a fair trial.

"They undermine confidence in the fairness of the trial and the reliability of the resulting death verdict," Clough wrote. He then cites cases where it is the cumulative affect of court and trial actions that caused a reversal and not a single action.

SCE Rebate program requires workaround for rural addresses

By DAVID JEROME
CORRESPONDENT

During the January Public Service Power Shutoffs, Southern California Edison encouraged customers to take advantage of their rebate programs. One program offers customers in high fire hazard areas up to $150 for the purchase of battery power packs, and $250 for generators. This reporter took them up on the offer and bought a 288-watt-hour battery pack, with a 100-watt solar panel, for $278, and applied for the rebate in late January.

However, the SCE rebate website refuses Idyllwild address. The site provides an email address for Enervee, the company administering the rebate program, and sends an automated response, citing a "much higher-than-usual volume of inquiries" after the January fires, and a "hope" that they would respond in 5-7 business days. After over a month, I reached out to an SCE representative to clarify the situation.

Jeff Monford, Senior Advisor for Corporate Communications for Edison International, said that traffic at the SCE Marketplace rebate program has "been brisk," with demand increasing by "20 times," but added that "things are leveling out."

Monford explained that Enervee uses a USPS database to confirm addresses, and since Idyllwild does not receive home mail delivery, requests from our area are rejected. He said that Enervee is implementing a "bypass" or "workaround" for this issue and pointed out the toll-free phone number included in the emails from Enervee.

The Enervee operator explained the process for applying manually. You need to send an email to sce@care.enervee.com (the address the automated responses come from.) The email should include the following:

- Your service account number (the number on your bill that starts with an 8, not the customer number that starts with a 7)
- Your first and last name
- Your mailing address, with your service address in parenthesis if it is different
- The name of the product you are requesting a rebate for
- A copy of your receipt.

You will get an automated email saying your request will be processed in five to seven days, but the operator said that, because of the influx of orders, rebates are currently taking about eight weeks.

Explore the rebate program at SCE Marketplace: marketplace.sce.com/

SPIRITUAL WORKOUT®

“ASK SPIRITUAL WORKOUT”
By Steven Morrison, M.A.

• Editor’s Note: Spiritual Workout is a practice of these 15 concepts: Be Compassionate • Beliefs Matter • Be Present • Choices Abound • Everything Is Energy • Have an Attitude of Gratitude • Intentions Matter • Judgments Separate Us • Listen to Inspiration • Mind & Body Are Connected • Take Responsibility • The Law of Attraction Is Always On • We Are All Connected • We Are Here for a Reason • We Belong to the Planet, Not the Planet to Us. More at spiritualworkout.com.

Dear Spiritual Workout:
It seems like everywhere I go people are talking about being present and “the power of now” and how the present moment is everything. They’re usually responding to my challenges with anxiety, which prevents me from being present in the first place. So, it seems there’s something for me to understand about all of this, which I currently do not. Could you shed some light?
Dear Reader:

I’ll give it my best shot. I’m actually quite intrigued by how you are getting consistent messages about being present as an antidote to anxiety because that’s exactly one of its benefits. When we are fully present, when we are not thinking depressingly about the past and when we are not thinking anxiously about the future, we’re just where we are. Fully present. Now, when you say you cannot be present because of your anxiety, that belief will keep you precisely where you are for as long as you have it. With all that guidance to encourage you to practice being present, please know it can only happen when you change your belief that you are prevented from being present, so I’d start there.

Dear Spiritual Workout:
This probably isn’t an issue that can be diagnosed, but I seem to be having something of a challenge when it comes to FOMO: fear of missing out. There’s always some mentor to meet, some hustle to chase, or some social or professional event I should attend and it’s exhausting me. Does SW have anything to say about FOMO?
Dear Reader:

If I didn’t know better, I’d think this was a set-up because, in fact, one thing I am fond of saying in the course of this work is: Spiritual Workouters don’t have FOMO! But before we get to why that is, listen to inspiration: that feeling of chronic exhaustion is telling you everything you need to know that you’re out of alignment with you. That means it’s time to create or re-align with intentions you have for what you’d like to experience in your life. Now, the fundamental reason that Spiritual Workouters don’t experience FOMO is one of the concepts we adhere to in this practice: we are here for a reason. That means, yes, for sure, we all got born on purpose for a purpose, one way or another, born on purpose into the bodies, families, cultures, and communities we were born into. This concept also means that we are wherever we are in any given moment of our lives on purpose as well, at least on a soul level. It means there are no accidents. I may lament that I’m the only one of my group of friends that didn’t make it to the long weekend getaway; I may resent why it is I couldn’t go, even though I wanted to. That is, unless I believe I’m always right where I’m supposed to be and that there could be value, on a soul level, to the experience of missing out...if I look for it. Beliefs matter. I’m right where I’m supposed to be or I’m missing out.

Newsom suspends
environmental laws to hasten wildfire protections

By JP CRUMRINE
CORRESPONDENT

On March 1, Governor Gavin Newsom signed another Executive Order to help fight wildfires and to reduce the damage they might cause.

The latest proclamation declares a State of Emergency throughout the State due to the threats of more wildfire. As a consequence of this potential threat, Newsom ordered the suspension of the California Environmental Quality Act and the California Coastal Act.

Following the devastating Palisades and Eaton Fires in January and the growing risk of new wildfires, Newsom took this action to accelerate more projects, such a vegetative management and controlled burns, critical to community protection from wildfires.

“This year has already seen some of the most destructive wildfires in California history, and we’re only in March. Building on unprecedented work cutting red tape and making historic investments – we’re taking action with a state of emergency to fast-track critical wildfire projects even more,” Newsom said in his press release. “These are the forest management projects we need to protect our communities most vulnerable to wildfire, and we’re going to get them done.”

CEQA requires local and state agencies to identify and mitigate the environmental impacts of their work. The Coastal Act regulates development along the Pacific coast, which is where the Palisades Fire was located.

Examples of projects, which suspension of these environmental regulations, will expedite include vegetation and tree removal, adding fuel breaks, prescribed fire, and more. It also authorizes non-state agencies to conduct approved fuels reduction work.

This action builds on Newsom’s Feb. 6 Executive Order to improve Community hardening and wildfire mitigation. That order directed the State Board of Forestry to advance implementation of regulations known as “Zone 0.” Now structures located in the State’s highest fire severity zone will be required to create an ember-resistant zone within 5 feet of all structures. In addition, the Governor directed the Office of the State Fire Marshal to release updated Fire Hazard Severity Zone maps. These will add 1.4 million new acres of land into the two higher tiers of fire severity.

The intent is to promulgate Zone 0 regulations this year. They will complement proposals for financial assistance and relief for homeowners included the Governor’s January Budget.

“While it is anticipated that the regulations would apply to new construction upon taking effect, requirements for existing homes would likely be phased in over three years to allow homeowners to prepare and prioritize mitigations and secure financial assistance,” according to the Governor’s Feb. 6 press release.

This is not the first time that Newsom has declared a State of Emergency due to catastrophic wildfires. In 2019, ahead of that fire season, Newsom order his administration to immediately expedite forest management projects. This included 35 priority fuel-reduction projects that the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection had identified, which could immediately help reduce the public safety risk from wildfire.

Public notices cover many topics, including business matters, liquor licensing, public auctions and sales, estates, zoning, public meetings, bids to sell goods and services to the government, local government finances and state and local elections. Public notice is a fundamental component of our system of representative democracy, which depends upon the participation of educated, responsible citizens.

Old Tyme Radio theatre group keeping local theater arts alive

By DAVID JEROME
CORRESPONDENT

Although Idyllwilders may know Mick Lynch as part of the Irish musical ensemble Two Micks and a Chick, and for his spoken word performances, he is reaching new audiences as the director of the theater troupe Old Tyme Radio, which brings a new radio play to Middle Ridge Winery (almost) every month. Larry Kawano has stepped up as the group's manager.

Kawano told the Town Crier how he and Lynch came to lead the group. "Soon after we did Nunsense in May 2024 at the Rustic, the founder and leader of our Old Tyme Radio group, Christina Nordella, let us know that she was leaving Idyllwild. This was an abrupt development which left us wondering what the future held in store for us. I organized a few meetings where we discussed the prospects of continuing, and out of it came our current arrangement: I would be the manager of our group, taking care of publicity, site negotiations, photocopying, communications with the group and such; Mick would be the producer, director, casting director, and the one who would be selecting all the scripts.

"We resumed our shows at Middle Ridge in August with Damon Runyan's "Madame Gimp" and have kept the same general format: a show every month (we did take a break in January) on the third Monday at 5PM. Before each show, Christina had asked the audience for donations to allow patients free sessions with her healing service; now, we ask donations for different non-profits around town."

Lynch's job begins with finding the right scripts. "It's got to have a certain number of people in the cast, I prefer two men, two women, or three each. I do have one 'quicky' coming up with just two actors." Kawano assists by using AI to extract scripts from recordings when that is all they have, and also provides sound effects.

The group is always looking for aspiring performers, and since the format allows scripts in hand, memorization is not required. Lynch has fostered an environment that newcomers to the theater, creating a close-knit ensemble. "Phyllis Brown did just one show with Nordella, she has become a solid member of the troupe, getting better and better."

The monthly schedule means fast turnaround. "If we're lucky we get three Monday rehearsals. I'm still missing an actor for one who had to bow out," Lynch said, again emphasizing the open call for actors. Kawano points out a shift in casting with Lynch. "Whereas Christina Nordella had pretty much a set troupe of something like nine or ten performers with occasional guests, Mick likes to cast a wider net for performers, drawing in new people he thinks would really fit a particular role."

Lynch is always finding ways to use special talents. "For the St Patrick's Day show, Justin Holmes will do some tap dancing, I will play a little fiddle before we start, then we're doing an old Jimmy Stewart piece, an episode of The Six Shooter."

Lynch has a few other coming attractions on his mind; a story by Damon Runyan and a piece about the Statue of Liberty, by Norman Corwin, who is sometimes called "the Grand Master of American Audio Theater." "Corwin had a half hour radio program, was kind of a poet journalist. He would write radio dramas that dealt with issues and ideas of the day, he had very famous actors doing these schticks." The upcoming production, Our Lady of the Freedoms, and some of her Friends, deals with the people who brought the statue from inception to completion, and of course includes Emma Lazarus, whose poem "The New Colossus" is inscribed on its pedestal. "It's not political but it's very appropriate for what is going on now politically. It's about the soul of our country, what that soul is about. It's about people that are being persecuted, and America as a landing place where people can seek freedom."

Lynch has theater in his blood. "My father, Ken Lynch, was a radio actor when he was young. He did series like Gang Busters, Suspense, FBI, and The Bishop and the Gargoyle. He was born in upstate New York. My mother was also an actor, but gave up her career to be a housewife, what women often did in the fifties. My father became a TV and movie actor. He was in a film serial, Hop Harrigan, about a fighter pilot in WWII, they would get into dogfights, that kind of stuff, based on a comic book." The elder Lynch played cops often. He played the title role in a series called The Plainclothesman, where he was never seen because the show was shot in first person point of view. Ken appeared in multiple episodes of Guns, Smoke, Bonanza, and McCloud. With his foray into radio theater, Mick feels a connection to his father's career. "I'm getting to relive my father's experience."

Mick is no newcomer to producing. "I was a film editor in Hollywood, I also directed some episodes of Murder She Wrote, with Angela Lansbury, The Waltons, Eight Is Enough..." Lynch moved to Idyllwild in 2000. "I came up here and wrote Out a' the Pine, I had to learn to play fiddle, I squeaked that through." The piece was deeply personal. "I was getting sober, I wrote one part, somebody at a meeting said, 'there's more to it.' So I wrote an hour-long piece, all in limerick. I did it first at an Irish playhouse in L.A. The person helping me knew Frank Ferro, and Frank invited me to do it for St. Patrick's Day in 2002 at Café Aroma, shortly after 9/11." For the members of the Old Tyme Radio troupe Idyllwild is more than a home or a venue, "Idyllwild is a place where people get to turn their Hobbies into fulfillment."

Old Tyme Radio's next show, an episode of the The Six Shooter, will be Monday March 17, at 5 p.m. Middle Ridge Winery, 54301 North Circle Dr.

BLOOD MOON

What is a blood moon? It sounds a little spooky! But it's really nothing to worry about.

Hi! I'm Earth! Sometimes, I block the sun's light from reaching the surface of the moon.

Wow! How rude!

When that happens, it's called a lunar eclipse.

The word lunar means having to do with the moon. That's ME!

A blood moon happens when just the right amount of light passes through my atmosphere during a lunar eclipse.

Dust particles in the air can make the moon appear reddish or brownish in color.

This is an unusual look for me!

But it doesn't last very long. A lunar eclipse is over within a few hours.

Cool!

Standards Link: Science: Use a model to understand eclipses.

How to Watch the Eclipse

The blood moon will be visible in most of North America on Thursday, March 13 and Friday, March 14. Here are the times to watch for it. With a family member, circle your time zone.

- Eastern Daylight Time (EDT): 2:26 a.m.–3:31 a.m. (March 14)
- Central Daylight Time (CDT): 1:26 a.m.–2:31 a.m. (March 14)
- Mountain Daylight Time (MDT): 12:26 a.m.–1:31 a.m. (March 14)
- Pacific Daylight Time (PDT): 11:26 p.m. (March 13)–12:31 a.m. (March 14)
- Alaska Daylight Time (AKDT): 10:26 p.m.–11:31 p.m. (March 13)
- Hawaii Standard Time (HST): 8:26 p.m.–9:31 p.m. (March 13)

How many moons can you find in this picture?

 - Baseball

STEPS:

1. One person holds the basketball, which represents Earth.

2. Another person holds the baseball, representing the moon.

3. In a dark room, point the light at the basketball.

4. The person holding the baseball moves it into the shadow of the basketball. That's a total lunar eclipse!

Idyllwild Library Cover to Cover program: Burgers for Books

CORRESPONDENT

Young readers have a new way to earn a visit to In-N-Out Burger while broadening their horizons. The Idyllwild Library is participating in the Riverside County Library System’s “In-N-Out Cover to Cover Book Club” program. Young readers, ages 4-12, may sign up and receive credits for reading books tailored to their age group. Those who read five books (or the equivalent of 5 hours reading) will receive a gift certificate from the popular chain. For the very youngest, books read to them by an adult count.

Participants may earn up to three sandwiches each. The flyer mentions hamburgers and cheeseburgers, but Idyllwild Librarian Yumi See confirmed that vegetarians can opt for grilled cheese and fries. Reliable sources tell us that these sandwiches are also highly sought-after. The program continues until April 12. Sign up at the library or online at: rivlib.beanstack.com.

Make School Work Easier

1. Include your children in discussions and share what you are reading or writing with them.

Nothing is more important to children than being with their parents.

2. Play games that encourage math, reading, and writing with them:

- Dominoes - adding/subtracting
- Card game, “War” - number order
- Go Fish - using addition and subtraction cards
- Scrabble - spelling, reading, and vocabulary
- Boggle - spelling, reading, vocabulary
- Scattergories - vocabulary, writing, reading
- Blurt - vocabulary

(I’ve created my own variations of other well-known games to help students practice the skills that need sharpening).

3. Refrain from correcting their homework, if possible. Point out what they did well, whether it’s handwriting or how creative they are.

a) Redirect them to a similar activity that uses the same skills.

b) Afterward, ask the child to compare the latter with the previous work, so your child can take ownership and know that they are doing it all by themselves.

STUDENTS OF THE WEEK

Mr. Barth Swanson, our Campus Security, has chosen the following students.

Tobias Gatt
Tobias Gatt in 3rd grade is quite the character. He has a vivid imagination and a great sense of humor. It always makes me laugh when he comes by on the playground with his daily antics.

Porter Ballou
Porter Ballou in 5th grade starts the day with a hearty good morning and a big smile. She is encouraging and a positive influence on her friends. We are happy to have her as a student at Idyllwild School.

CREATURE CORNER

Last week in Days of Our Nine Lives, the ARF cats learned that two cats and a puppy were adopted and that new kittens have arrived.

Pepper: So, any news for this week?

Harley: Well, we know about our new kittens, but not much other than that.

Marlowe: Unless you haven't heard the news that the annual Pets of the Year contest and fundraiser has opened.

Pepper: That's right! There will be nine winners who will each receive not only great titles, but amazing prizes as well.

Harley: I heard that locals, full and part time, may enter their dogs, cats, or "others."

Rowan: What are others?

Pepper: Any pet that doesn't fit the dog or cat categories. In the past, winners have been a pig, dove, donkey, goat, and rat, to name a few.

Marlowe: And the money goes into a fund to help locals pay for veterinary emergencies and necessary care.

Pepper: Oh! Here come the kittens! You know, kittens would be good to enter into this competition.

Savannah: (bouncing into the room) Hi! Yes, I'm one of the five adorable kittens, and we'd love to be adopted and entered into the contest. I know that I am definitely Pet of the Year material.

London: And so am I! Actually, any cute photo of a pet will work.

Pepper: Hello kittens! I hope lots of folks will come into the ARF House soon to meet you.

Harley: And then they'll also meet us adult cats. It's a win-win!

Cheyenne: Then everyone has two choices. They may come in to meet us cats AND they may enter their own lovable pets at www.gogophotocontest.com/arfpetsofyear. They will win either way!

This week's Creature Corner is sponsored by Lola Davis. Would you like to be a sponsor? Please let us know! Be sure to keep up with the animal antics of Days of our Nine Lives each week. And please stop in to say hello to the entire adoptable cast at the ARF House, 26890 Hwy 243. ARF is open Saturdays 10-3, Sundays 10-2, and during the week by appointment. Please call 951-659-1122.

Hill mops up after drenching, damaging rains

This gaping hole on Highway 243, just north of Jameson Drive, is one of three on local highways causing problems for motorists. The two other holes, caused by erosion, are located on Highway 243 near Bay Tree Springs and on Highway 74 near McCall Park Road.

Residents dealing with road closures, flooding

By Andrea Cass
Assistant Editor

Mother Nature has wreaked havoc on the Hill.

The non-stop torrential rains that fell upon the San Jacintos last weekend have turned Strawberry Creek and other unnamed creeks and springs into white-capped rivers, and the San Jacinto River into a giant mudslingsing snake. Local roads and highways have caved in, fallen away and closed down. Boulders have tumbled and crashed to the ground, and trees have literally hung on by the roots to some banks and mountainsides.

"We got 8-9 inches of rain [on Sunday, March 5] in Pine Cove," said Jerry Holdber, Pine Cove Water District general manager. "There's been a lot of runoff, but I've also seen water sheets coming out of the banks. The ground is saturated. There are springs running I haven't seen in 10 years."

ACCORDING TO DON Whitlow, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Riverside, last weekend's onslaught of rain was the result of a split pattern of sub-tropical moisture from the south and a northern stream of air from the Gulf of Alaska. The result was 7.64 inches of rain Monday, Feb. 27-Sunday, March 5, with 6 inches falling on March 5 alone.

"It's happened before," Mr. Whitlow said. "It's rare, but it's not unusual."

However, Idyllwild Fire Department Capt. Terry Nelson felt differently.

See pages 12, 13 for more pictures, related story.

"I can't remember a time when we've had 6 inches [in a 24-hour period]," he said. "Everybody I've talked to can't remember when it rained that hard."

THE POWERFUL ERODING effects of the water were seen all over the mountain — on residential streets and highways and in people's homes and businesses.

"[We've had] all kinds of problems," Capt. Nelson said. "There's flooded basements in Cedar Glen."

According to Dick Beggs, Camp Maranatha director, half of a dormitory slid off into Idyllwild Creek between 6:20 and 7 p.m. on March 5 and power lines were taken out in the process.

"This building's supposed to have six

Mud and debris covered South Circle Drive near Village Center Drive, requiring tractors to clear the road. The rains also caused heavy flooding in ditches along South Circle Drive.

Consider moving beyond the usual methods to find a more creative means of handling a difficult on-the-job situation. Avoid confrontation and aim for cooperation instead.

TAURUS

April 20 – May 20

A seasonal change creates a new look for the outdoors. It also inspires Taureans to redo their own environments, so this is a good week to start redoing both your home and workplace. Enjoy!

GEMINI

A misunderstanding needs to be straightened out so the wrong impression isn’t allowed to stand. If necessary, offer to support the use of a third party to act as an impartial arbitrator.

CANCER

June 22 – July 22

A career change offering what you want in money and responsibilities could involve moving to a new location. Discuss this with your family members before making a decision.

LEO

July 23 – August 22

Feeling miffed over how you believe you were treated is understandable. But before you decide to “set things straight,” make sure that the whole thing wasn’t just a misinterpretation of the facts.

VIRGO

August 23 – September 22

Showing you care makes it easier to build trust and gain an advantage in handling a delicate situation. What you learn from this experience will also help you understand yourself better.

LIBRA

September 23 – October 22

Planning for the future is fine, especially if you include the roles that family members may be asked to play. But don’t be surprised if some hidden emotions are revealed in the process.

SCORPIO

CAPRICORN

December 22 – January 19

Your watchwords this week are “focus, focus, focus.” Don’t let yourself be distracted from what you set out to do. There’ll be time later to look over other possibilities.

AQUARIUS

January 20 – February 18

A workplace opportunity might require changes that you’re not keen on making. Discuss the plusses and minuses with someone familiar with the situation before you make a decision.
